Public Got Freezers of Same Type As Vaughan's

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The man who made the deep-freeze units that Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan got in 1945 said yesterday that they were the same kind that were being sold to the public.

General Vaughan, White House military aide, said over the weekend that he had been told the freezers were "factory rejects" or "experimental models," and "did not have commercial market value."

Albert J. Gross, Milwaukee manfacturer, who turned out the deep-freeze units, told reporters at the Capitol yesterday that he did have "some trouble" with the 1945 machines. He reminded them that it was a war year, and that he had to use whatever materials he could obtain.

Declines to Be Specific

He wouldn't answer questions as to whether the freezers that were ordered for General Vaughan by two "old friends" were rejects or experimental models. Neither would he say whether they had commercial market value.

"Were they the same machines that were being sold to the public?" a reporter asked.

"Yes, they were," Gross said.

Gross had testified previously that the deep-freeze units that went to General Vaughan, who passed some of them on to his friends in the Administration, were paid for by the Albert Verley Co., dealer in essential oils used in perfume and soap.

The Milwaukee man talked to reporters yesterday after he had testified at a closed session of the Senate subcommittee investigating 5-percenters or influence peddlers.

Hoffman Testifies

Harry Hoffman, Milwaukee advertising man, who handled public relations for the Verley Co., also testified behind closed doors. He was one of the two "old friends" who, General Vaughan has said, gave him the deep-freeze machines, the other being David Bennett, president of Verley.

Earlier yesterday, at a public session, the Senate subcommittee heard an Army officer relate how he was told that "White House pressure" was being applied in the case of an Army contract—a contract being sought by an organization represented here by James V. Hunt, central figure in the 5-percenters inquiry.

The word "smuggling" popped up at the hearing, too, but was left hanging in the air.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), used it in absolving Mrs. Harry S.

Mrs. Truman's Freezer Role Called Proper

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), who brought the deep-freeze transaction into the open, said yesterday that there was nothing in the record "even remotely suggesting anything improper on the part of Mrs. (Harry S.) Truman."

"I think she's one of the finest things about the White House," said McCarthy. "I think that's one time Harry showed good judgment—when he picked Bess."

McCarthy, one of the Republican members of the subcommittee making the 5-percenters inquiry, made his explanation in view of the weekend statement by Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide.

Vaughan said that he "made gifts" of the deep-freeze units to the First Lady and four Administration officials after two old friends had given them to him as a "courtesy." They were paid for by the Albert Verley Co., of Chicago, dealer in essential oils used in perfume and soap.

Do U. S. Voters Favor Aid To Parochial Schools?

How do Americans stand on the issue at stake in the recent controversy between Mrs. Roosevelt and Cardinal Spellman? Would most voters like to see Federal funds allocated to parochial schools?

The Gallup Poll has checked opinion on that question in a nationwide survey. Be sure to read the results in Wednesday's Washington Post.

Vaughan's Name Mentioned

Counsel in '5 Percent' Quiz, Reported Fist Target in Hotel

A remark about Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, presidential aide, apparently set off brief fisticuffs last night between William P. Rogers, counsel for the Senate Investigating committee, and Charles Patrick Clark, a former member of the committee staff.

The disturbance occurred in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel.

Clark, a lawyer engaged in private practice now, was a member of the investigating committee's legal staff when President Harry S. Truman, then Senator, headed it.

Rogers is now counsel for a special subcommittee which has been checking into the reported influence of various individuals in securing Government contracts.

The name of General Vaughan has been mentioned frequently during the investigation.

Although both the individuals who took part in the brief encounter declined formal comment on the incident, several Congressmen who were eye witnesses but didn't want their names used gave reporters this version:

Rogers and Clark met in the Mayflower. Rogers said something about General Vaughan that Clark didn't like. Clark struck Rogers, then made two more lunges at him, but was intercepted by bystanders.

Rogers didn't strike back. He turned and walked out the front door of the hotel.

Later a reporter outlined for Clark the version he had heard and asked Clark if that was what happened.

"Well, you're on the target," said Clark.

Later Clark added: "I feel very kindly toward Harry Vaughan."

Rogers could not be reached for his version.

Newspapers and wire services learned about the disturbance from John Maragon, whose name also has cropped up frequently in the Senate committee's study. Maragon has been questioned privately by the committee investigators.

Warning

Persons visiting Washington on business are very frequently the dupes of impostors with which the city abounds. These scoundrels represent themselves as Members of Congress, or as belonging to one of the important branches of the Government, and offer their services to facilitate your business in any way that lies in their power, for which they ask a sum which varies with the nature of the business, or of the service they propose to render. Such men are simply impostors, who are constantly on the watch for strangers, out of whose simplicity and ignorance of public affairs they expect to reap a rich harvest. It is best to decline all offers of assistance in Washington, whether gratuitous or for a stated compensation, unless the party making the offer is known to you to be a man of integrity, and capable of carrying out his promises. There are a plenty of men of character in the city who make it their calling to act as a medium between strangers and the various departments in the arrangement of business affairs between them. Such men are always easy to find, and a man who is fleeced by Bogus Congressmen and other impostors, has only his own stupidity to blame.

Men are not the only persons thus engaged. A number of women, some of whom are beautiful, accomplished, and attractive, exert themselves to decoy strangers into trusting them. They offer to gain access to the President, the Secretaries, the heads of bureaus, and other officials, at times when men are denied, and generally charge high prices for their services. What especial influence they may possess with members of the Government they refuse to explain, but not infrequently induce men to pay them for services which they never render, or which, if rendered, accomplish nothing.

By placing their business in the hands of a competent, and known professional man, and turning a deaf ear to all impostors and adventurers, both male and female, strangers will always have justice done them, save themselves from extortion and robbery.

Virginia Jury Frees Deputy Accused of Slaying Crabber

Accomac, Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—A special grand jury in Accomack County circuit court today refused to indict David Acree, Virginia Fisheries Commission deputy charged with murder in the fatal shooting of Earl Lee Nelson, 50, Crisfield, Md., crabber.

The 26-year-old deputy who had been held in the county jail here since shortly after his arrest was released after the grand jury submitted its report.

The six-man grand jury heard nine witnesses during the forenoon and an even larger number this afternoon.

Among the witnesses heard was State police lieutenant R. B. King, who directed a State police investigation at the direction of the Governor's office.

The first witness called was George H. Badger, jr., commission surveyor. Badger was a member of a joint Virginia-Maryland surveying party which resurveyed the bi-State jurisdictional line near Cedar Straits, in the Chesapeake Bay, south of Crisfield, after the shooting.

The survey followed contention which arose over whether the crabber, Earl Lee Nelson, 50, of Crisfield, was shot in Virginia or Maryland waters.

The crabber was shot after Acree, 26, boarded the crabber's boat from a fisheries patrol plane to arrest Nelson on a charge of crabbing illegally in Va. waters.

Maryland requested extradition of Acree, but Governor Tuck denied this at an extradition hearing in Richmond on August 5.

Acree contended the shooting in Nelson's boat was accidental and occurred during a scuffle for the deputy's rifle.

Judge Dismisses Union Members' Suit Against Irving

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 15 (U.P.).—A suit alleging that Representative Leonard Irving (D., Mo.), diverted funds of the Hod Carriers', Building and Common Laborers' Union to his own use was ordered dismissed today by Circuit Judge John Cook.

Cook sustained a motion by the defense to dismiss the suit which was filed July 16 by members of the local which Irving heads as president.

Cook said that in his opinion the matter was one which "can best be settled by the union tself."

Full-Sized Pants Pockets Promised Sailors in 1952

By the United Press

The United States Navy, yielding to a complaint voiced in its ranks since 1797, promised sailors yesterday that their blue uniform pants will have full-size pockets.

But taking pains to avoid precipitate action, the Navy added that the new pants won't be ready until June 30, 1952.

In addition to big pockets where pockets ought to be, the 1952 model will boast zippered fly fronts instead of the 13-button drop fronts.

Bell bottoms, which are supposed to make it easier for a sailor to shed his trousers when he has to swim for his life, will be retained.

The updated pants will be part of a new dress blue uniform whose jumper will be the same as at present except for loose, coat-style sleeves instead of tightly buttoned cuffs.

It will be the first major change in the familiar blue uniform since the Navy was established in 1797 and adopted uniforms patterned after those of the British navy.

White uniform trousers were changed to button fly fronts and given two small top front pockets around 1900.

But the blue pants, to the unspeakable irritation of tens of thousands of sailors, still have only one small pocket near the waistband.

2½ Million Facing U. S. Pay Tieups

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Military and civilian Government personnel numbering more than 2,500,000 faces the possibility of payless paydays after tonight unless Congress takes emergency action.

The House yesterday failed to approve a stopgap resolution which would permit the armed services and other Government agencies whose appropriations are held up, to operate "on the cuff" until the money bills are passed.

Caught in the appropriations log-jam are not only 1,612,000 military personnel of the armed services, but also 882,121 civilian employes of the various service branches.

Other Agencies Involved

Involved also are workers of those agencies covered by the independent offices appropriation bill, the Interior Department bill, the foreign aid bill and the third deficiency bill. The civil functions bill, involving some 46,928 Army Engineers, also is blocked, but this personnel is counted in the overall military estimate.

House refusal to pass the emergency resolution means that these Government agencies which have been operating on credit since July 1 may no longer do so.

Although the resolution, introduced by Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), won a vote of 176 to 145, it failed of the necessary two-thirds majority required to suspend the rules.

Cannon to Take Steps

Chairman Cannon said he would ask for action today, so the resolution can be enacted by a simple majority. There is no certainty, however, that the Rules Committee will grant his request.

Cannon last night issued a statement calling the "untoward results" of failure to enact his resolution "impossible to measure."

He said, for example, that agencies operating hospitals, such as the Veterans' Administration and the Bureau of Indian Affairs, will have patients to take care of no funds available. Veteran pensions, due for periods beginning August 16, will have to stop, he said. Failure to provide for the armed services, he declared, may mean that those eligible for discharge August 16 will have to wait until funds are on hand for transportation home.

The Maritime Commission, Cannon stated, would have no authority to pay expenses of trainees leaving schools. Shutdowns on Interior Department and Army Engineer construction projects may be necessary, he said. The Interior Department will not have cash to pay local personnel for fighting forest fires, Cannon pointed out. ECA, he said, will have to cease all procurement immediately.

Some 27 billion dollars in taxpayers' funds is tied up in the accumulation of unpassed money bills, which either have not been acted on by the Senate, or are tied up in House and Senate conferences.

House members were obviously angry over what they termed the Senate's delaying tactics on the money bills. Senate money authorities, on the other hand, charged House members with obstructionist tactics in joint conferences.

Representative George H. Mahon (D., Tex.) urged passage of the credit extension on the ground that its rejection would "leave the Government in utter chaos."

Maryland's Loyalty Law Held Invalid

By Benjamin C. Bradlee
Post Reporter

Maryland's rigorous Anti-subversive Act was declared "unconstitutional and invalid" yesterday by Circuit Judge Joseph Sherbow of the Supreme Bench of Baltimore City.

"Law deals with overt acts, not thoughts," he said. "It may punish for action, not thinking."

The judge ruled that the controversial law, in effect less than four months, violated the "basic freedoms" guaranteed by the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution and the right to due process guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment.

Sherbow

The antisubversive law also "violates the Maryland Constitution and Declaration of Rights, is an unlawful bill of attainder, and is too general for a penal statute," Judge Sherbow wrote in his 5000-word opinion.

Ruling to Be Appealed

Attorney General Hall Hammond said he would move promptly for a review by the Court of Appeals at Annapolis, Maryland's highest tribunal.

"The Supreme Court has made it clear that laws may punish acts and conduct which clearly, seriously and imminently threaten substantive evils," Judge Sherbow said. "They may not intrude into the realm of ideas, religious and political beliefs and opinions."

The antisubversive law was framed by a commission headed by Frank B. Ober, Baltimore lawyer. It was generally regarded as the strictest of the several State laws passed since the last war dealing with subversion. It is the first such State law to be declared unconstitutional in its entirety, according to the Library of Congress.

The Ober law defines subversive activities, makes engagement in them a felony punishable by 20 years in prison or a $20,000 fine; provides for creation of a special assistant "Attorney General in Charge of Subversive Activities"; requires a loyalty oath of all State employes except laborers; requires all candidates for public office to file affidavits that they are not subversives; and denies public funds to private institutions which did not file with the State their procedure for uncovering subversives on their faculties.

The constitutionality of the Ober law was tested by four professors of Johns Hopkins University, a professor of Morgan State College, a psychiatrist, a George Washington University professor, a salesman, a general medical practitioner and a sculptor.

They asked Judge Sherbow for an injunction preventing 71 State officials from enforcing the Ober law as originally passed on April 1. They also asked him to declare unconstitutional another law, passed 21 days later which made the Ober law "emergency legislation."

Attorney General Hammond and 70 other State and city officials countered with demurrers, declaring both laws to be constitutional and valid.

Judge Sherbow's decision that

To deprive is to shut out.

The dictionary goes that far. Case histories of U. M.s go a bit further.

Deborah was the younger of two children in the H. family. Her father was a deacon in the . . . church, a man respected in his community, whose interest in religious activities amounted to that of a zealot.

In the H. family there were prayers before each meal, church attendance was a must twice on Sunday. The whole family life had religion as its orbit.

This necessitated being "good." Deborah's older sister, Veronica, found this easy. She was always being held up as a model to the community—and to Deborah. Mr. H. was always bragging about Veronica, and always reprimanding Deborah because she, instead of being "good," seemed to find some perverse pleasure in rebelling against parental discipline.

"The devil must be in that girl," Mr. H. would say. Or, "Deborah, can't you, just once, do what your father wants you to?"

This rebellion, smoldering in childhood, grew more and more apparent as Deborah went into her teens. She felt unwanted at home, like a piece of puzzle that doesn't fit in the picture.

It wasn't long before Deborah began lying to her father about her activities; sneaking to go on dates, to be "like the other girls."

Potato Boom Is Widespread; Pickers Share at $25 a Day

(This is the second in a series of articles on the Government's costly potato price-support program).

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Fort Fairfield, Me., Aug. 15.—The four-year postwar boom that came to the Maine potato area, a small part of one county, Aroostook, in 1946, was unique in one respect. Nearly everybody shared in it.

A newcomer here is first attracted by the score or more of large income farmers, growers who sold from $100,000 to half a million dollars worth of spuds to Uncle Sam in the one crop year, 1948, that ended last June.

But Congress' free-handed generosity wasn't limited to just a portion of the potato country's population. Nearly everyone in this limited area got a piece of the pie.

Growers who didn't sell to the Government benefited by the price level that the huge Government purchases maintained. It was almost impossible not to sell to Uncle Sam. The lower grades went to starch mills (there are 25 around here) or for livestock feed, and the Agriculture Department bought those.

Last fall pickers, the men who follow the digging machines, got as high as $25 a day. This spring planters made $15 to $25 a day. Not bad for unskilled labor.

The small farmer got his, too. That's because probably no other crop in America pays the grower so much for such little acreage.

Everywhere you hear stories of quickly acquired wealth that sound like tales from the Klondike gold rush. A Presque Isle oil station operator told about his brother-in-law who last year netted $13,160 on a 30-acre farm that cost him only $100 an acre in 1939. His farm, including a house, barn, toolshed and potato storage building, cost only $3000 and the Government loaned him the money to buy it.

Here's how he did it: He had 28 acres in potatoes. They averaged 480 bushels, or 288 100-pound sacks. Uncle Sam paid him $3.20 a hundredweight for his graded No. 1 last February. The lower grades he sold to the starch mills, also through the Government and other Government outlets. He averaged $2.50 per hundred pounds, less than many other farmers averaged.

Every farmer here, in spite of the size of his own income, com-

1.45-Billion Fund Includes Treaty Nations; Curb Set For 5-Percenters

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Administration's full $1,450,000,000 program to help foreign nations arm themselves against aggression was approved last night by the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The measure provides $1,160,990,000 for the North Atlantic Pact powers, $211,370,000 for Greece and Turkey and $27,640,000 for Iran, Korea and the Philippines.

Two strings were attached to the funds under the committee's action: (1) Cash spending for the North Atlantic nations would be limited to $655,840,000 during the first year and (2) mutual defense plans with western Europe would have to be worked out before all the money could be spent.

The rest of the money approved for those countries would be in contract authorizations only, which would require appropriations in the future.

Aimed at 5-Percenters

Another amendment was aimed at "5-percenters.' This would penalize anyone leaving Federal service, who within two years of leaving, accepts a gift or payment in connection with purchase of arms for the program. It also would punish anyone who offers such gift or payment.

Otherwise, the program was approved substantially without change. The committee was reported to have split 14 to 5 on the bill.

Cash payments to the Atlantic Pact nations would be made in two installments. The first, amounting to $498,130,000, would finance the program until March 31. The second, $157,710,000, would last until June 30. But this latter amount would be provided only if the President certified to Congress that a unified command had been established in western Europe to conform with the North Atlantic alliance.

Plans Progressing Rapidly

There was little doubt that these terms would be met, however, for the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff reported upon their return from a recent tour that plans for European defense against possible Communist aggression were progressing rapidly.

The House Committee's bill also provides that the President or Congress can end the program at any time.

On the other side of the Capitol, meanwhile, two top Republican foreign policy leaders proposed restrictions on the program,

Albania Army Aiding Rebels, Greeks Report

Athens, Aug. 15 (AP).—Tension grew along the Greek-Albanian border tonight as the Greek army claimed it had wiped out organized Communist guerilla resistance in the Vitsi Mountain redoubt.

The Greek general staff announced that the bodies of 20 Albanian soldiers had been picked up two miles inside Greek territory near Kroustalopiyi on the west side of the demolished stronghold. Along with the bodies, the staff said, were recovered the records of an Albanian army company which gave "precious information on Albanian aid to the guerillas."

Later a special communique announced that guerillas had made four new assaults from Albania on positions around Kamenic Mountain, on the border north of Konitsa.

(The Albanian radio reported another protest to the United Nations over alleged Greek incursions across the frontier. The broadcast said the Greeks "are waging with ever-increasing intensity armed attacks against the territorial integrity and sovereignty of Albania, constantly launching into fighting with ever-greater military formations.")

(A Greek rebel broadcast heard in London said an American Army officer, identified only as Major Kayman, had been killed Saturday on the Vitsi front. A Soviet broadcast gave his name as Helman.)

Dispatches from Kastoria, near the border, said the people of that town would welcome an invasion by Albania. Newspapers there have been advocating an attack on Albania.

9 Die, 49 Saved As Airliner Lands in Ocean

Galway, Ireland, Aug. 15 (AP).—Forty-nine persons were saved in a flare-lit rescue operation today after a Transocean airliner ran out of gas and landed in the Atlantic 15 miles off the Irish coast.

Nine others of the 58 aboard were killed or lost trying to escape from the four-engined Skymaster (C-54).

The plane bellied into the ocean so gently that survivors said they were not shaken from their seats.

The plane carried 47 Italian emigres going to settle in Venezuela, and 11 Americans, all Transocean personnel. Eight of those lost were Italians.

One of the dead was an American crewman from Brooklyn.

Among the unhurt survivors was the famous American woman pilot, Ruth Nichols. She had signed on in Rome as a workaway stewardess to return to the United States.

The rescue was organized quickly by alert ground personnel at Shannon in radio communication with ships at sea and planes flying

McCormick Paid 4.5 Million In Cash for the Times-Herald

Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, paid $4,500,000 cash for the Washington Times-Herald, it was disclosed yesterday. A first accounting of the estate of Mrs. Eleanor M. Patterson, former owner of the Times-Herald, was filed by her executors in District Court yesterday.

The accounting was filed by William C. Shelton and Frank C. Waldrop, Times-Herald executives, named with 5 others as principal beneficiaries in Mrs. Patterson's will, and by Joseph W. Brooks, New York investment broker. It showed the total estate to be worth $15,566,737.30.

Sale of the newspaper was recorded as a $2,525,134 capital gain over a previous $1,974,865 evaluation of the paper's assets.

The major portion of the estate was in 272½ units of stock in the McCormick-Patterson trust which owns the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News and other interests. The stock, valued at $35,000 a share, added $9,537,500 to the value of the estate.

Attorney Louis G. Caldwell told reporters that arrangements have been made for the sale of the Chicago Tribune-New York Daily News stock at $35,000 a unit. He said the names of the purchasers would be disclosed in later accountings.

It cost the estate $210,000 in legal fees to contest caveat pro-

Russia Removes Ambassador To Yugoslavia

London (Tuesday), Aug. 16 (U.P.).—Russia has relieved her ambassador to Yugoslavia of his duties and named him a deputy foreign minister, Moscow announced early today.

The news came at a moment when relations between Russia and Yugoslavia seemed near the breaking point. No mention was made of a successor to the ambassadorial post.

The official news agency Tass said the Council of Ministers, or cabinet, had appointed Anatoli Lavrentiev a deputy foreign minister and released him from his duties as ambassador in Belgrade.

Russia's action did not necessarily mark a break in relations. It frequently happens that a country withdraws its ambassador as a mark of disfavor with the policies of another country, and leaves its embassy in the care of a charge d'affaires.

German Election Winners Prepare To Form Coalition

The Christian Democratic and Free Democratic parties, after victory of the anti-Socialists in Sunday's West German election, moved yesterday to organize a coalition government.

Theodor Heuss, leader of the right-wing Free Democrats, is believed in line for president, and Konrad Adenauer, chairman of the conservative Christian Democrats, for chancellor.

Frankfurt, Aug. 15 (AP).—A scholarly politician and an author were in line today to head the West German republic as a result of the Sunday election victory of anti-socialist parties.

Tall, lean Konrad Adenauer, 73-year-old chairman of the conservative Christian Democrats, loomed as the natural choice for chancellor, a position equivalent to prime minister.

Theodor Heuss, 65, author of more than 20 books, whose father took part in the abortive German revolution of 1848, was widely mentioned for president, a job with a bigger title but less power. He is head of the right-wing Free Democrats.

Extremists Set Back

Christian Democrats and Free Democrats moved quickly toward a coalition to govern 47 million Germans following a complete count of the Sunday vote in which 402 deputies were chosen for West Germany's first parliament.

The election proved a decisive setback for the Communists, who gathered but 5.74 per cent of the vote, and two extreme nationalist parties—the German Party and the German Right Party, who together got 5.83 per cent.

Although the Social Democrats, who favored a program similar to the British Labor Party, ran second with 29.4 per cent, they had no socialistic allies to whom they could turn to organize a coalition.

Together, the Christian Democrats and Free Democrats lacked only 11 seats of having a majority. It appeared they could easily pick these up by linking with one of the small right-wing parties also opposed to socialism.

Free Economy Seen

Germany's first freely elected government since Adolf Hitler thus appeared likely to set a course against socialism, favor a free economy, align with the Western Powers in international politics, and seek entry into the family of European nations at Strasbourg.

The complete official returns showed these results:

| Party | Popular Vote | Seats |
|---|---|---|
| Christian Democrats | 7,357,379 | 139 |
| Social Democrats | 6,933,372 | 131 |
| Free Democrats | 2,788,563 | 52 |

| Bavarian Party | 986,606 | 17 |
| German Party | 940,088 | 17 |
| Economic Reconstruction | 681,981 | 12 |

| Radical Socialist Freedom Party | 217,627 | 0 |

300,000 Fewer Red Votes

These results showed the Communists lost 300,000 votes from their total in the 1946 and 1947 state elections. In the state elections of those years they recevied 9.4 per cent of the vote.

All the other better known parties polled more votes than in those years, due partly to the increased population. But the Christian Democrats and Social Democrats lost ground percentage-wise. In 1946-47 the Christian Democrats got 37.7 per cent compared with 31 per cent this year. The Social Democrats slumped from 35 per cent to 29.2 per cent. The Free Democrats, however, boosted their percentage to 11.7 from 9.1 in 1946-47.

Both Heuss of the Free Democrats and a spokesman in Christian Democrat headquarters emphasized the similarity of the two party programs.

"A coalition between the Christian Democrats, Free Democrats and other right-wing parties could work well," said Heuss.

The chief disagreement between the two parties is over centralization of the government. The Christian Democrats have stood firmly for a federal government with strong states' rights. The Free Democrats, like the Social Democrats, have a strong central government.

Adenauer declared tonight the election "stressed that the German people do not want to have anything to do with socialization," and added:

"It has been furthermore proved that some nationalistic tendencies in Germany have no significance at all. This might quiet down the outside world."

The losing Social Democrats said in a statement that "the political result will probably lead to the formation of a bourgeois bloc—the defense of property at the cost of large masses of the people."

Max Reimann, West German Communist leader, defeated in his own district but elected as a member at large under proportional representation, called the election "a revival of the forces of reaction."

In Berlin United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy congratulated the German people "on the evidence of good citizenship" in the election in which nearly 80 per cent of the 31 million eligible voters cast ballots.

Adenauer, a lawyer who was jailed three times by Hitler's Gestapo, is a devout Catholic. As chairman of the parliamentary council, he piloted the new West German constitution through the deliberations at Bonn. As chancellor, he would wield the real executive power of the government.

Heuss was a member of the Reichstag until ousted by the Nazis in 1933. One of his widely known books, "Study of Hitler," was translated into four languages—and burned in Germany by the Nazis. As president he would be largely a figurehead.

Sharp Import Cuts Wrong, Europe Told

Paris, Aug. 15 (AP).—Paul G. Hoffman, Marshall Plan administrator, told a news conference today that drastic cutting of imports from the United States was "precisely the wrong way" for Europe to cure her dollar shortage.

He also declared automobiles are not the kind of export that can be increased to the United States.

Hoffman avoided answering questions which invited direct comment on economic policies of the British government. However, the British have announced plans to reduce buying in America. It also has pushed automobile exports to the United States.

Hoffman is on a tour of inspection of Marshall Plan countries.

Instead of import cuts, he urged Europeans to double or triple their exports to the United States.

"I know of no other constructive way to close a dollar deficit than to earn a dollar income," he said. "Certainly to close that gap by drastic curtailment of imports is precisely the wrong way to do it. It could only mean a lower standard of living for Europe."

Pointing out that Europe sold only about one billion dollars' worth of goods to the United States last year, he said, "If the right type of goods is offered and merchandised, that can be doubled or tripled in the next five years."

He suggested that Europeans work "on the type of goods where the labor content is high" for export to the United States.

"The high level of wages in the United States does not allow us to make all the handicraft goods we could use," he advised.

The administrator said United States tariffs were about where they were in 1914, and denied they were a major barrier to European exports to America.

Indonesians Hold to Truce

Batavia, Java, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—The joint Dutch-Indonesian military board today ordered both sides to withdraw their troops across the cease-fire line and warned against further violations of the truce.

Dutch officials began informal exchanges with Republicans concerning the release of 5000 Chinese held prisoner by the Indonesians.

An announcement by Dutch authorities said all public processions and demonstrations in connection with the fourth anniversary of the Indonesian revolution and birth of the republic Wednesday would be banned.

Display of the Republican red-and-white flag was also banned because it might give rise to "incidents," the Dutch announcement said.

MacArthur Relation A Citizen

The Washington Post
MRS. ELENA MacARTHUR

The blonde and green-eyed Russian-born wife of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's nephew became an American citizen in naturalization ceremonies yesterday in District Court.

She is Mrs. Elena Paula MacArthur, 29, the wife of Bowman McC. MacArthur, 42, of 1843 Mintwood pl. nw.

MacArthur, now a lawyer, met his wife in Shanghai soon after VJ-Day while he was an Army first lieutenant. They married in June, 1947, in New York City.

Elena was jubilant over her naturalization.

"I am sure there is no other person in the world as happy as I am," she said. "I hope that I live up to the great honor and privilege of being an American."

She added that she was also happy to be "accepted" by the "great" MacArthur family.

She described herself as having been in Shanghai as a white Russian refugee. Her mother was at the ceremony with her as was MacArthur and his mother.

Others sworn in by Judge Richmond B. Keech in the same ceremony were:

Mrs. Lidia E. Stoss, 25, of Italy. She is married to Helmut W. Stoss and resides at 415 Edgehill dr., Alexandria.

Mrs. Mona Gay Wint, 27, of England. She is the wife of Charles James Wint, and resides at the Bellevue Hotel.

Mrs. Ethel G. Barnett, 36, of Australia. Her husband is Frank Edward Barnett. They reside in Baltimore.

2 U. S. Youths Missing on German Tour

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 15 (AP).—Army highway patrols searched tonight for two American youths who disappeared during a bicycle tour of Germany.

The missing youths, who may have been detained in the Russian zone, are Warren Oelsner, 20, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and Peter H. Sellers, 18, of Philadelphia.

(Edward G. Oelsner, jr., brother of Warren, said in Oyster Bay tonight the State Department had told his father the boys last were seen July 30 at Buechen, where customs men turned them back.

(After an eight-day inquiry in the British and American zones, the State Department seemed satisfied the two had gone into the Russian zone. American authorities in Berlin were instructed to make representations to the Russians for their return, Oelsner said.

(Finally, Edward G. Oelsner, sr., of the United States Navigation Co., instituted a search. He said Hamburg agents of the company sent an emissary into the Russian zone to try to find the youths.)

Army headquarters in Frankfurt said High Commissioner John J. McCloy had sent a cable last week from the United States, asking the Army to lend aid in the hunt.

The boys arrived in Germany last month, after visiting London and Paris.

Young Oelsner is a junior at the University of Pennsylvania. Sellers is the son of socially prominent Mr. and Mrs. Lester H. Sellers of Philadelphia.

Strasbourg Fight Looms Over Germany

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 15 (AP).—Representatives in the European Consultative Assembly squared off tonight for what may be their biggest battle—the issue of Germany's admission to the European Council.

Two other conflicts were building up—a new resolution on European federation and the old Irish partition question. Any one of the three may crop up when the assemblymen reconvene Tuesday after a weekend holiday.

Britain's Winston Churchill, his aides reported, is preparing a major address to the assembly urging the council to invite the West German republic to become at least an associate member at once.

Meanwhile, a group of assemblymen planned to introduce a resolution for the creation of a European agency with limited functions but real power before the end of 1950. This, they said, would be the first step toward a definite federal regime for Europe.

Under the project, the assembly would designate a commission to work out detailed proposals for submission to the various national parliaments and report back here next year.

Ireland's Eamon De Valera was reported working on a statement which would bring the Irish partition problem before the assembly.

Irish representatives feel there is one change in Europe's political structure which would make Anglo-Irish cooperation more effective. This would be, they feel, to make Northern Ireland a part of the Irish Republic.

Blueprint Made For Backward Countries' Aid

Geneva, Switzerland, Aug. 15 (AP).—A complete blueprint for helping underdeveloped countries to achieve economic and social stability was drawn up tonight by the U. N. Economic and Social Council.

The plan, which will be sent to the General Assembly for final approval, was undertaken largely on the intiative of the United States. It closely parallels President Truman's proposal for aid to backward countries.

The plan was adopted by a 15 to 0 vote, with the three Soviet-bloc states—the Soviet Union, White Russia and Poland—abstaning.

The program involves the expenditure of a maximum of 36 million dollars next year through the U. N. and specal agences, and an estmated 50 mlion dolars the followng year.

The largest part of the funds wll be alocated to the Food and Agreculture Organzaton to rase the standard of food producton n the underdeveloped areas of Asa, Afrca and South Americ.

FAO wll receve 29 per cent of the funds aganst 23 per cent for the U. N., 22 per cent for the World Health Organzaton and 26 per cent for three other agences.

A meetng wll be called by the counci durng the General Assembly to figure contrbutons from partcpatng governments.

Guerillas Wiped Out, Gen. Van Fleet Reports

Athens, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Gen. James A. Van Fleet, head of the U. S. military mission to Greece, said today an estimated 60 per cent of the 7000 guerillas involved in the Vitsi Mountain battles of north Greece were annihilated in the past week's fighting.

Van Fleet, returned from a front line tour, said about 30 per cent of the Communist fighters had escaped following their crushing defeat by the revitalized Greek army. The other 10 per cent were prisoners, or still fighting in isolated actions, he reported.

Coalition Takes Over Syrian Rule

Damascus, Syria, Aug. 15 (AP).—A coalition cabinet headed by the aged Premier Hasem Bey Atassi assumed control of Syria today.

The government announced it was only temporary. The cabinet was formed after yesterday's military coup during which President-Marshal Husni Zayim and Premier Muhsen Bey Berazi were speedily seized, tried and executed by a firing squad.

Col. Sami Hennawi, 51, Syrian hero of the Palestine war, who led the coup, officially turned authority over to Premier Atassi. Hennawi said the army's task was over and that the government was in civilian hands.

This was confirmed by the cabinet in a communique which said a constitutional government would be set up as soon as possible. The cabinet promised to rule "without personal ambitions or interests," work for friendship with the neighboring Arab governments, uphold the Arab League and attempt to retain friendly relations with foreign powers.

The announcement said a constitutional assembly will be called to frame a new constitution "free from the mistakes of the past."

City life here is proceedings as usual, with little outward excitement.

Change in Syria Pleases Most Arabs

Amman, Hashemite Jordan, Aug. 15 (AP).—The whole Arab world except Egypt expressed satisfaction today with the new Syrian government which replaced the regime of Marshal-President Husni Zayim. Zayim was executed in a military coup Sunday, along with his premier.

King Abdullah said he was very sorry Zayim was killed but he had been expecting such a coup. He added: "If the new Syrian government is good and represents the will of the people, Hashemite Jordan will be the first power to recognize it."

Egypt, biggest and most powerful Middle Eastern power, is observing three days of mourning over the death of Zayim. The Zayim regime had been playing ball with Egypt.

Iraq approves the removal of Zayim, who charged last spring that Iraqi troops were massing on the Syrian border, a contention disputed by neutral observers.

Dispatches from Damascus reported general agreement among neutral observers in Syria that the coup headed by Col. Sami Hennawi to remove Zayim brought a change for the better.

Hongkong Faces State Of Emergency

Hongkong, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—The Hongkong government prepared tonight to announce an all-out state of emergency in this British crown colony as Chinese Communist armies swept southward against meager opposition.

The Chinese Nationalist government stepped up its flight from Canton, while Nationalist military leaders met there to map a last-ditch stand against the Red armies.

British troops were pouring into Hongkong on every available ship and some 20,000 already had arrived. The RAF has sent in all available planes in the Far East and the British navy has strengthened its fleet.

Attorney General J. B. Griffin said the emergency laws will be submitted Wednesday on the floor of the Legislative Council for immediate approval.

In Canton, Acting Foreign Minister George Yeh told the Central News Agency that Foreign Office branches were being establish in Chungking and Formosa to take over functions of the main office.

Communist forces swept past the Nationalist defense positions at Kanchow and occupied the village of Nankang, 18 miles to the south and less than 190 miles from Canton.

They were only 30 miles north of the government base of Tayu, to which the Nationalists withdrew their Kanchow headquarters when that city was threatened last week. A government spokesman said fighting in Kanchow was serious, but that the Nationalists still held the city.

Ambassador Kirk Has 45-Minute Visit With Stalin

Moscow, Aug. 15 (AP).—United States Ambassador Alan G. Kirk met for about 45 minutes in the Kremlin tonight with Prime Minister Stalin. An informed source said Kirk had reviewed United States and Soviet relations in general terms.

The Ambassador told newsmen after the conference: "I don't think I will have anything to say about my visit tonight, but I may have something to say tomorrow."

The United States Embassy described the call as a "courtesy visit." It was learned that Kirk had requested the meeting—the first time any high American official has seen Stalin in almost a year.

(The Moscow radio said Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky also was present at the meeting.)

Kirk, a retired admiral who succeeded Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith as Ambassador to Moscow, arrived in the Soviet capital in June.

Barden Hits Talks On Education Bill

Bigger and Better

Old Age Bill Approved by Committee

By the United Press

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday gave final approval to a far-reaching new social security bill which would bring 11 million more persons under old age pensions and increase benefits by 70 to 80 per cent.

It also would establish a system of disability benefits similar to old age pensions and increase the taxes required to pay for the expanded program.

The committee, which had approved most of the proposals separately, voted out the entire bill yesterday. It goes a long way toward meeting President Truman's request for such legislation, but omits one of his major recommendations—public aid for all needy persons.

House Democratic leaders would like to get action on the bill at this session, but there is understood to be strong opposition in the Rules Committee which must clear all legislation sent to the floor.

There is no chance of Senate action until next year. Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.) of the Senate Finance Committee, said yesterday his group will not even hold hearings on the question. He added that, in any event, the Senate log-jam would make a vote at this session impossible.

By The Associated Press

A move for a round-table discussion of Federal aid to education met opposition yesterday from Representative Barden (D., N. C.), author of a bitterly contested education bill. He termed the move a "wholly foolish gesture."

Both Barden and Representative Steed (D., Okla.) said they would not attend the discussions scheduled next week by Chairman Lesinski (D., Mich.) of the House Education and Labor Committee.

They assailed the sessions, scheduled to start Monday, as a "trumped up deal" and a "grandstand play" designed to get Catholic members of Congress "off the hook."

The Barden bill has been blocked in the Education and Labor Committee for several weeks, after Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York attacked it as discriminatory and anti-Catholic. The measure would provide some 300 million dollars yearly in Federal grants to States on a share-cost basis. Most of the opposition has centered around a provision barring use of any of the funds for private and parochial schools.

In announcing plans for the meetings, Lesinski told committee members in a letter that he had invited some education, labor and religious leaders to join in the talks which, he said, might last a week.

Among those he asked to attend were Earl J. McGrath, U. S. Commissioner of Education; Dr. Rumsey Marston, of the National Education Association; E. J. Butler, of the National Catholic Welfare Council, and representatives of the AFL and CIO.

Barden asserted that Lesinski's move was a "grandstand play for some ulterior motive I fear I understand." He did not elaborate on this, but added:

"If Mr. Lesinski would take the trouble to read our subcommittee's hearings he would see that all the people he has called have expressed their opinions fully on this.

"I cannot conceive of Mr. Butler, for instance, changing his position, since to my knowledge the (Catholic) Church hasn't changed its opinion on this thing in 1000 years."

Steed, a supporter of the Barden bill, called the proposal a "trumped-up deal on the part of Lesinski, McCormack and their Roman Catholic friends to try to get themselves off the hook."

"The country in now aware," he added, "who has blocked Federal aid to education this year and why."

Steed said he was referring to Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts.

Speaker Rayburn today virtually wrote off the possibility of passage of an education bill this session.

Unit Approves Fund to Move Observatory

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved and sent to the Senate floor the $634,000,000 military public works bill, including an $8,500,000 authorization to transfer the Naval Observatory here to Charlottesville, Va.

The observatory, between Wisconsin and Massachusetts aves., has been seeking a new site for several years because changed atmospheric conditions locally make its present site unsatisfactory for scientific observations.

The omnibus measure also carries authorizations for two projects in the District; improvements at the Naval Research Laboratory in Anacostia, $1,285,500, and an Army transmitting station, costing not more than $1,570,000.

In Maryland nine projects, totaling $18,398,000, were approved, and in Virginia 10 were authorized at an aggregate cost of $18,812,000.

A similar Army and Navy public works bill is pending before the House. Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) has said he will not press for House action before Congress adjourns.

B-36 Group Flies To Coast to Quiz Gen. 'Hap' Arnold

A six-man House Armed Services subcommittee is scheduled to take off from here at 11 a. m. today for California to take testimony from General of the Air Force H. H. Arnold, retired, wartice chief of the Army Air Forces in the current investigation of B-36 bomber procurement.

The initial order for this "intercontinental" craft was placed in 1941, when General Arnold and other military leaders thought England might fall and the war against Germany would have to be carried on from this side of the Atlantic.

The investigative group will question General Arnold at his Sonoma ranch, near San Francisco, since his health will not permit him to come to Washington. Afterward, it plans to hear several West Coast aircraft manufacturers.

Strikes Exploited To Get Members, N. Y. Red Testifies

New York, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Howard Johnson, New York State educational director of the Communist Party, testified today at the trial of 11 of the party's leaders that Communists exploit strikes to win new members.

Johnson said it was his job to "educate" prospective members of the Communist Party and to continue their education once they joined.

For the first time since the trial started, United States Attorney John F. X. McGohey was absent. Judge Harold R. Medina announced at the start of the morning session that he had excused McGohey but did not say why he had done so.

Taft Attacks Welfare Plan

By the United Press

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio) said yesterday that President Truman's plan for a department of welfare would, if carried out, create a "dictator" in the field of health, welfare and education.

He also said it "flies directly in the face" of recommendations of the Hoover Commission on Government reorganization.

Taft jumped the gun on the opening of Senate debate on the plan, scheduled for today, because he said the President saw fit to "intervene in the legislative process" by writing a letter on the subject to Vice President Alben W. Barkley.

In the letter, Mr. Truman said his proposal was indorsed by former President Herbert Hoover, who headed the commission bearing his name.

Taft, who heads the Senate Republican Policy Coommittee, acknowledged that the commission indorsed a department of welfare, but noted that it also recommended a separate united medical administration for all Federal health services. Under the President's project, the U. S. Health Service would go into the welfare department.

Under the President's plan, Taft continued, the welfare secretary would become the "most powerful figure in the Government as far as domestic affairs are concerned."

1000 Federal Housing Workers To Be Released

Approximately 1000 employes in Federal housing expediter offices throughout the country were notified yesterday that they will lose their jobs at the end of 30 days due to a cut-back in funds for the agency.

Announcement of this effect was made by the office of Tighe Woods, the housing expediter.

The action was taken, officials said, because of an expected cut in funds for the agency when the independent offices appropriation bill is finally approved by Congress. The bill would provide funds to keep the agency going from July 1, this year, through next June 30.

Draw Opens on New 14th St. Bridge . . .

By Harry Goodwin—The Washington Post

BARGES PASS UNDER—When the draw on the new 14th St. bridge was opened at 4 p. m. yesterday for the first time, first boat to pass was the tug Virginia with a tow of barges. Although the tug could have cleared if the draw were shut, it still gets honors for the initial trip. The bridge will be opened to traffic next fall

Defense Team Is Confirmed By Senate

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday gave a unanimous vote of confidence to the new top-level military team which President Truman has picked to plan national defense under the tightened unification law.

Without a dissenting vote, the Chamber confirmed the nominations of:

Gen. Omar N. Bradley, who led the Twelfth United States Army group to victory in Europe in World War II, to be the first permanent chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

Gen. J. Lawton (Lightning Joe) Collins, commander of the Seventh U. S. Army Corps which drove from the Normandy beachhead to the Elbe River, to succeed Bradley as Army Chief of Staff.

Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, commander of the battleship flotilla which supported the Okinawa landing in 1945, to serve another two-year term in his present post of Chief of Naval Operations.

The Senate also ratified the promotion of Assistant Secretary of the Army Tracy Voorhees to Undersecretary, and the appointment of Archibald Alexander, New York City attorney, to succeed him as Assistant Secretary.

At the committee's recommendation, the Senate also approved promotions of:

Brig. Gen. George Kennebeck, chief of the Air Force Dental Corps, to major general.

Brig. Gen. Charles Irving Carpenter, chief of Air Force Chaplians, to major general.

Japanese Volcano Is Reported Active

Tokyo, Aug. 15 (AP).—Mount Asama, 8343-foot volcano, thundered into activity today.

Three heavy rumbles were heard between 3:30 a. m. and 8:30 a. m. at vacation spots in the area 95 miles west of Tokyo. Ashes fell to a depth of an inch at Hongen Village in Nagano Prefecture.

Report Declares 'Scientist X' Involved in Spying for Reds

By the United Press

The House Committee on Un-American Activities reported yesterday that the mysterious "Scientist X" was involved in a "positive" case of Communist espionage at the Berkeley, Calif., atomic research center.

It also said there were two other wartime spying "attempts" at the center. All were made through a Communist cell, consisting of scientists working at the University of California radiation laboratory, it added.

The allegations were made in a foreward to a transcript of hearings in the cases. It did not give details, but said there were two "attempts to obtain information regarding atomic developments on the part of the Soviet government."

Gave Formula to Nelson

One "positive case," the committee said, involved Scientist X, whose identity has not been disclosed but whose story first was told by the group in a report last fall. He then was described as a technician who worked at the Berkeley laboratory during the war.

The committee said he was known to have given an atomic "formula of importance" to Steve Nelson, now a Communist Party organizer in western Pennsylvania. Scientist X has denied the story. Nelson has refused to answer any questions on grounds he might incriminate himself.

The committee's report was based on hearings held last April, May and June. They involved Mr. and Mrs. Robert R. Davis, Dr. and Mrs. Frank F. Oppenheimer, David J. Bohm, Giovanni Rossi Lomanitz, Joseph W. Weinberg and Nelson.

The committee stated specifically that it has no evidence indicating that the Davises, Oppenheimers, Lomanitz or Bohm were engaged in espionage. All the witnesses except Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Oppenheimer and Nelson were employed at the radiation laboratory.

Oppenheimer and his wife admitted membership in the Communist Party from 1937 to 1941, before Oppenheimer's atomic research work at Berkeley. Davis and his wife said they were recruited into the party by Lomanitz while at the laboratory.

Weinberg has denied party membership and Lomanitz and Bohm have declined to discuss the question on grounds they might incriminate themselves.

House Unit Seen Granting Truman Sesqui Request

The House Appropriations Committee is expected today to grant President Truman's repeated requests for some Federal funds to help finance Washington's sesquicentennial celebration next year.

The committee is slated to report out the fourth deficiency supply bill at a morning session. Chairman Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.) told reporters yesterday that the President's request for three million dollars to underwrite the sesqui observance will be considered in that measure.

The President had previously asked for three million dollars, which was trimmed to two million dollars by the Senate two months ago. This was rejected by the House as earlier sesqui requests had been denied by the House Appropriations Committee.

Loyalty Probe Dropped 62 of 9987 Workers

By The Associated Press

Out of 9987 cases handled by Government loyalty boards, 62 Federal employes have been dismissed on grounds of doubtful loyalty.

Jobs have been denied to 29 persons seeking them.

This was reported today by the loyalty review board of the Civil Service Commission. The report covered work on the Government loyalty boards since they were established in March, 1947.

Most of the loyalty investigations were conducted by the FBI. However, 101 were carried out by the Office of Naval Intelligence and by the commission itself.

There were 914 Department of Army cases on which no reports were made to the loyalty review board.

Denazification Plan 99.8 Pct. Completed

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 15 (AP). The denazification program in the United States occupation zone of Germany has been 99.8 per cent completed, the American Military Government said today.

Of 13,199,778 persons registered under the law, 26.1 per cent were found to be chargeable cases.

Protesting CIO Union Officer Ends Communist Membership

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Maurice Travis, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Union, today announced his resignation from the Communist Party "with a great sense of indignation."

Travis, a storm center in a stormy union, said that as a result of his resignation he has signed a Taft-Hartley non-Communist affidavit, and that the union now is in full compliance with the law.

The resignation from the Communist Party membership "was not an easy step for me to take," Travis said. "I believe under our Bill of Rights, for which our forefathers fought, that an American has as much right to be a Communist as he has to be a Republican or a Democrat, a Jew or a Catholic, or an Elk or a Mason.

"Membership in the Communist Party has always meant to me as a member and officer of the international union that I could be a better trade unionist."

Travis' union was ordered by the CIO to merge with the CIO United Steel Workers, and Travis, who will retain his post, has been in the forefront of the fight against the merger.

Maryland's Anti-Subversive Act Ruled Invalid

both laws were unconstitutional came when he overruled the demurrers.

The Emergency Act was the Maryland Legislature's answer to efforts by Ober law opponents to delay enforcement of the law by filing a valid referendum petition.

Judge Sherbow declared the Emergency Act unconstitutional because, he said, "it is an ex post facto law . . . making punishable as a crime what was not criminal when done." The Ober law was passed March 31, and normally would have become effective June 1. But the emergency law was passed on April 22 and said that the Ober law had been effective for 21 days.

"Anyone violating this law between March 31 and April 22 was guilty of a crime carrying severe and heavy penalties," Judge Sherbow said in his opinion, "although such a person could not know until April 22 that his earlier act was in fact a violation of the law."

Judge Sherbow found the Ober law instelf unconstitutional and invalid on separate counts.

First, he said that the section of the Ober law which required an oath of loyalty from candidates for public office violates that section of the Maryland Declaration of Rights which says ". . . nor shall the Legislature prescribe any other oath of office than the oath prescribed in the Constitution."

Indirection Charged

Hammond and the other defendants claimed that the Ober law provided an oath only for candidates, not for officeholders.

Judge Sherbow said that the Ober law "seeks to do by indirection what cannot be done directly . . . The law forbids an additional oath of the elected official. To allow the oath of all candidates, knowing one will be the successfully elected official, is to nullify the restriction of Article 37 of the Declaration of Rights.

Next, Judge Sherbow ruled that the Ober law violated the right of free speech, and the right of a man accused of an offense to due process of law. He quoted Supreme Court Justice Jackson: "If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be orthodox in politics, nationalism, religion or other matters of opinion, or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein."

19 Rhetorical Questions

Due process is violated when crimes are defined in "vague and ambiguous terms," as in the Ober law, Judge Sherbow said.

The judge asked 19 rhetorical questions in his opinion, questions which he said could not be answered under the vague terms of the Ober law.

Judge Sherbow objected particularly to the definition of a foreign subversive organization. He wrote "It means 'any organization directed, dominated or controlled directly or indirectly (his italics) by a foreign government . . .' What does 'indirectly' mean?

"To ask the question is to answer it. This is so vague and indefinite as not to meet the requirements of a penal statute. Does 'indirect' mean that the organization is a foreign subversive organization when it changes with the party line as given by Moscow, or if it opposes the Atlantic Pact, or the Marshall Plan, or the foreign policy of this country, or has connection with or is affiliated with international labor organizations whose policies may be 'indirectly' controlled from England or Canada?

Denies Point Is Far Fetched

"What becomes of the status of a dissenting member, of a minority of members, or even a majority who differ with the officers?"

"This may seem far-fetched, but the test of the constitutionality of a statute ordinarily is not what has happened, but what may happen under it," he said.

The court also objected to the words "reasonable grounds," used as the standard by which a man "may be deprived of the opportunity to work for the State."

"In Maryland no man may be convicted of a crime except on the evidence," he ruled.

Lastly, Judge Sherbow ruled that the Ober law was unconstitutional because it was a bill of attainder, a legislative act inflicting punishment upon persons supposed to be guilty of an offense without any conviction in the ordinary course of judicial proceedings.

He quoted a recent Supreme Court decision, U. S. vs. Lovett, in which "punishment was inflicted without the safeguards of a judicial trial and determined by no fixed rule. The Constitution declares that that cannot be done either by a State or by the United States."

"Just Skirmish," Says Carter

That case involved an act by Congress, which specified that no Federal funds could be used to pay the salaries of three Government employes, accused of disloyalty by a House subcommittee. They were Robert Morss Lovett, William E. Dodd, jr., and Goodwin B. Watson.

Maryland's antisubversive law crowned a crusade by State Senator Wilmer C. Carter of Baltimore, who pledged himself to stamp out communism in the Free State after hearing a luncheon lecture on the subject.

He described Judge Sherbow's decision yesterday as "nothing more than a little skirminsh."

Ober, it was noted in Judge Sherbow's opinion, was named as head of the legislative commission to study subversive activities in Maryland after he had published two articles on "Communism vs. the Constitution" and "Sedition vs. the Constitution."

The Baltimore attorney, who was recently involved in a dispute with Harvard authorities on communism and the Harvard faculty, was in Ontario, Canada, on vacation, and could not be reached for comment.

Hammond said he thought that opponents of the Ober law could probably appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court if the Maryland Court of Appeals overruled Judge Sherbow. He said he doubted that the State could appeal if the Court of Appeals affirmed Judge Sherbow's decision.

The Communist Party of Maryland filed a similar action. Hammond filed a similar demurrer, and Judge Sherbow entered the same decision in that case.

our military operations," he said.

But Representative John Taber (R., N. Y.), ranking minority member of the Appropriations Committee, said that in previous years Government departments had been left temporarily without funds, and no permanent damage had resulted.

On some occasions executives in various departments have had to establish temporary personal credit funds out of their own pockets to carry employes along until legislation was enacted.

House members, anxious to rest after their thirty-third straight week of work, received assurances yesterday that even if the Senate is behind, they can count on a two-week rest beginning a week from next Thursday.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D., Tex.) said all immediately pressing measures before the House should be out of the way by that time. He said the House may take a series of three-day recesses with an agreement to transact no business.

Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.) said there is "absolutely no chance" the Senate, and hence Congress as a whole, will quit before Labor Day.

Lucas' comment was made after a White House conference of the "Big Four" congressional leaders.

He blamed the lag on the long-windedness of Senators. Lucas said appropriations, minimum wage and reciprocal trade will tie the Senate up beyond Labor Day.

Wherry Urges Speed

Meanwhile, Senate Minority Leader Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.) told reporters he believed the Senate could adjourn within two weeks. He called for passage at this time of appropriations measures, minimum wage and farm legislation. Wherry said he believed the arms aid bill would require a much further study and action should be deferred until next session.

Rayburn declared that arms aid, Korean and flood control bills are the main measures still on the House agenda. He said it looked very doubtful if there would be action this session on aid to education.

Lucas has pledged action this session on a new displaced persons bill.

The Democratic leader said he hoped the Senate would decide this week on what to do with President Truman's first two reorganization plans.

The plans, calling for creation of a department of welfare and for transfer of the Federal employment and jobless pay offices to the Labor Department, have been unfavorably reported by a Senate committee.

Goes for Women's Vote

but declared they would not delay getting the arms aid plan started.

Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (Mich.), and John Foster Dulles (N. Y.) offered amendments to cut the funds for North Atlantic Pact powers by $160,990,000 and split the remaining one billion dollars into half cash and half contract authority.

They also proposed a series of changes designed to tighten up the arms aid bill and specifically provided for a congressional veto if the mutual assistance plan bogs down. Vandenberg and Dulles said they offered their plan as an "interim" measure to finance arms aid while the North Atlantic Treaty powers are formulating a sound defense system.

House Committee Chairman John Kee (D., W. Va.) told reporters that his group had voted down an amendment offered by Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.) to provide 200 million dollars for military aid to non-Communist China.

The latter was defeated by a "not particularly close margin," Kee said.

Lodge also was the author of the amendment putting strings on the arms aid money.

The two GOP foreign policy experts stressed this theme in their amendments.

"We believe in beginning now," said Vandenberg and Dulles in a joint statement," but also we believe in making certain that what is started now will integrate surely and quickly into the agreed plan for area defense that will emerge from the North Atlantic Treaty . . .

"We do not want two separate programs running at the same time."

Congress or the President would be empowered to hold up any equipment ordered which might not fit into the integrated defense plan under one of their amendments. Another permits Congress by concurrent resolution of both houses—as well as the President—to stop arms aid to any nation.

The $160,990,000 cut proposed by Vandenberg and Dulles would eliminate authority to use 155 million dollars to stimulate arms production in western Europe. The two Senators said the question of permanently xpanded munitions industry on the Continent should be left to the Pact Council to study before funds are provided.

Vandenberg said he and Dulles had discussed their amendments with Secretary of State Dean Acheson but had not received his indorsement. The Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees, acting jointly, will consider their plan along with others today and hope to have a bill ready soon.

Meanwhile, Gen. Douglas MacArthur and Vice Admiral Arthur C. Badger were sent formal notice yesterday that two Senate committees want them to return and tell what they know about conditions in the Far East.

Secretary of Defense Johnson cabled the two men a copy of a resolution adopted Friday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee by a 13-12 vote. The Armed Services Committee had previously suggested that the two men return.

Johnson did not order either MacArthur, Allied commander in Japan, or Badger, commander of United States naval forces in the Far East to return. Instead he asked for their comments on the matter as soon as possible.

Gay Paper Boleros Suggested for Borderline Cases

Montreal, Aug. 15 (AP).—City Councilor Dave Rochon came up with a suggestion today for eliminating shock to Montreal's modesty caused by summer low-and-behold dresses.

He said police could carry thin, prettily colored printed paper boleros—short jackets. They would offer one to any woman walking the avenues with too much bust or shoulder showing.

Rochon said it was mostly visitors from the United States who display too much.

"I shouldn't be surprised if those boleros become a big advertisement for Montreal," Rochon said. "The visiting ladies would take them back as souvenirs. Instead of being offended, they would be flattered, and Montreal's principles of modesty would be saved."

Four Steel Firms 'Can't Raise Pay'

New York, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Four steel company presidents said today they could not meet a fourth-round wage increase because their customers would not stand for higher prices.

Their statements were given to President Truman's three-man fact-finding board, which must report by August 30 its recommendations for a basis of settlement in the current steel dispute. The United Steelworkers of America (CIO) threatens a Nation-wide strike September 14 if its demands for a 30-cent hourly package demand is not met.

H. G. Batcheller, president of Allegheny Ludlum Steel Corp., said the union's demand for higher wages, pensions and social insurance would cost the company between 40 and 65 cents an hour.

Such an increase, even figuring on the union's estimate of 30 cents an hour, would have cut company profits last year from $6,800,000 to $2,300,000, he said.

L. F. Rains, president of A. M. Byers Co. of Pittsburgh, told the board his company would lose $2,357,000 a year if the union's demands were enforced for his 3000 employes.

Bridges Defies It

Hawaii Gets Injunction On Picketing

Honolulu, Aug. 15 (AP).—The territorial government today obtained an antipicketing injunction in its showdown drive to reopen Hawaii's strike-plugged ports. CIO longshoremen's leader, Harry Bridges, personally defied the Circuit Court order.

The injunction restrained the striking CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union from picketing Pier 9, where the freighter Hawaiian Merchant is berthed. The government is trying to get ships moving with its own stevedoring operation under an emergency act of the Territorial Legislature.

Bridges went to Pier 9, accepted service of an injunction notice and marched as a picket for a half-hour. He indicated he was inviting arrest so the union could begin threatened court test of the dock seizure law.

Police and deputies made no move to stop the ILWU president. The office of Territorial Attorney General Walter D. Ackerman, jr., indicated Bridges might be arrested for contempt.

In an effort to end the sea blockade the Territorial government has set itself up in the stevedoring business under a special law.

Having seized the facilities of the seven struck stevedoring firms and hired its own longshoremen, the Government today chose the Matson freighter Hawaiian Merchant for its first unloading. It immediately ran into a snag.

Delegates of the CIO Marine Cooks and Stewards and the Independent Marine Firemen declared their union members would walk off the ship if the Government tried to unload it behind the ILWU picket line.

Attorney General Walter D. Ackerman, jr., then decided to seek an injunction under the new Dock Seizure Act, declaring,

The law provides for use of injunctions and for jail terms and fines for violations.

Bell, CIO Claims Vary

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 15 (AP).—The Bell Aircraft Corp. said 1148 employes had passed picket lines to report for work today, while striking CIO United Auto Workers claimed their demonstrations "had stopped the company cold."

In declaring that 1148 union and nonunion employes had reported for work, the company said the turnout was better than at any time since production was resumed Thursday in the face of a walkout of 1700 workers.

Twenty-one of the nonstrikers flew to work. They chartered an airliner at Buffalo airport and flew into Niagara Falls airport, which adjoins the Bell plant.

The Niagara County sheriff's department also took to the air. Sheriff Henry E. Becker hired two helicopters and deputized the pilots to patrol over the highway outside the plant.

Becker said he feared violence as a result of a decision by the smaller UAW Local 516 to cross picket line. But none developed.

Local 516, which represents about 300 nonproduction workers, decided to return to work because "the unity of our local was at stake," President James T. Parsons said. He added that members of 516 would not perform any production duties.

Negro Cleared In Rape Gets 'KKK' Threat

Chicago, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—A death threat signed "KKK" reportedly was received today by James Montgomery, 56-year-old Negro released from prison last week after serving 26 years of a life sentence on a false rape charge.

Attorney Luis Kutner, who helped Montgomery win his freedom, reported the threat was made in a letter received by Montgomery's wife. Kutner also was threatened in the note, which read:

"We will torture you hard, burn your house down and cut you into pieces."

Montgomery last week convinced Federal District Court he was not guilty of attacking Miss Mamie Snow, 62, in 1923. A recently discovered medical report showed she was not raped.

Potatoes Threaten Price Support Plan

Special to The Washington Post

Fort Fairfield, Me., Aug. 15.—The whole farm price support program is threatened by the extravagance of potato purchases, Ralph S. Trigg, head of Commodity Credit Corp., told Maine growers today.

"We simply cannot go on indefinitely with any program which results in excessive waste, and which costs the taxpayers of the country too much," Trigg, who does the Government buying, declared.

Trigg also is administrator of the Production and Marketing Administration. He spoke at the annual Potato Blossom Festival here.

"We bought neary 70 million dollars worth of surplus 1948-crop potatoes here in Maine alone," Trigg said. "Less than half of your potatoes went to normal markets.

"When you consider the increasing difficulty and cost of finding diversion uses for these potatoes, it is perfectly obvious that the sound answer does not lie in unlimited purchases to support the market.

"We need a better approach, and the authorization to develop such an approach, if we are to avoid a program collapse which could threaten the whole farm price support structure."

Trigg bluntly told the growers —some of whom got as high as half a million dollars apiece for potatoes they sold the Government last year—that "the potato price support programs have been costing far too much in recent years.

"Through a combination of factors—including lower price support levels and lower yields in some areas—the total costs this year should be far below the record cost on the 1948 crop.

"But it is perfectly clear that we do not yet have the answer for our basic problems. It is harder to find disposal outlets for surpluses. Program costs are still too high."

Trigg remarked that Maine production had tripled in the last 25 years—that "per acre yields have increased so that even with adjustment in acreage, production can still outrun effective demand.

"Per capita potato consumption has been dropping steadily," he pointed out, "shrinking potential market outlets. Our people ate about 153 pounds of potatoes each in 1920. In 1948, consumption per person was down to 108 pounds.

"This is a tough situation. There is no easy answer. Maine's total commercial shipment of 1948 crop potatoes was only about 33,000 carlots, lowest since 1922.

"At present Maine yields, it would be possible to produce this many potatoes on about 90,000 acres. This would be the lowest acreage since the 1890s, when rail transportation became generally available for northern Maine.

"Any reduction to this level would mean a major revolution in the economy of Aroostook County. For comparison, the 1949 Maine commercial acreage goal is around 141,000 acres.

"No matter what sort of Government program may be developed, it seems obvious that in the long run Maine potato producers will have to market more or produce less."

Potato Boom Widespread

plains about costs. This farmer's seed cost $100 an acre. He used Canadian stock at $2.50 a bushel. He planted 40 bushels to the acre. Before price supports, he planted only 28 to 30.

He piled on the fertilizer. He had to, planting so heavily. That cost $69 an acre. He spent $34 for insecticides and fungicides. His labor was $35. Incidentals, he claimed, raised the total per acre cost to $250.

His gross was $720 an acre, his net $470. His crop from 28 acres brought him Government checks for $20,160. He paid out $7000. That left $13,160. On his remaining acres he raised garden truck. That didn't count. He didn't have to pay income tax on that.

Another story has to do with a 19-year-old boy—a wartime 4F—who went to farming when the Army refused to enlist him. He now has $50,000 in the bank, owns 200 acres of the finest Maine potato land, well equipped with machinery and buildings, and is less than 23 years old.

Another farmer with a big new Buick told this reporter that he made $50,000 in four years on his 144-acre farm. He had about half in potatoes.

'Santa Won't Live Forever'

He begged that his name not be used. With New England caution he remarked: "I don't want my downstate relatives to know." Then with traditional Yankee shrewdness he commented: "I'm salting it down. Santa Claus won't live forever. I see they're trying to kill him down in Washington now."

The small farmer, however, hasn't the margin of profit that a larger operation has. Necessary machinery is expensive and the same investment is required for 20 acres as for 100. Labor costs are higher for the smaller grower. On a large farm, where there is some diversification, labor can be kept busy in slack seasons, putting up hay, harvesting oats, etc.

No section, however, is cursed by a one-crop economy worse than Aroostook, even the tobacco country of southern Maryland. Here livestock raising sometimes pays, but because of the short pasturage season it is at a disadvantage with States farther south. It is too far north for corn. There are no mills for wheat.

No section was worse hit during the depression or the years immediately after. This boom is helping average out some of those bad years.

An idea of the importance of potatoes to Maine's economy is given by these figures: Last year Maine realized 11 million from meat animals, 29 million from dairy products, 30 million from poultry, almost three million from feed crops, four million from fruit and 20 million from miscellaneous crops. Its potato crops brought in 113 million.

Potatoes accounted for well over half its entire farm income. They were virtually all raised in a small portion of this one.

The amazing fact is that even the big operators, those who got the biggest Government checks, farmed what would be comparatively small acreage for equivalent returns elsewhere.

Newell Smith, who, with his partner, a Bostonian potato broker, Francis Reardon, sold $495,000 worth of potatoes to Uncle Sam last year, has less than 1000 acres in spuds. This year he is cut to 800. Some of that acreage, he said, yielded 550 bushels per acre. Contrary to earlier reports, Smith said the Government didn't get all his crop. Much of his harvest was certified seed stock which brought more than support prices.

Beef About Labor Costs

Virtually every farmer in spite of his prosperity beefs about the price of labor. Labor costs are three times prewar figures. For instance, they pay pickers, the harvesters who gather the upturned crop, 20 to 25 cents a barrel. In the harvesting season, from September 15 on, there isn't enough local labor available so hundreds are imported from Quebec under bond.

Last year these pickers averaged $20 to $25 a day. Everyone who touches Maine potatoes, it seems, is a midas. In the spring potato planters got $15 to $23 a day.

They have three measurements for potatoes here. When they speak of yields it is always in bushels or 60 pounds. Potatoes are sold in hundredweights, usually in 100-pound sacks. In fixing payments for labor or for local transportation they use the barrel of Colonial days, 11 pecks or 165 pounds.

Every potato man, grower, dealer, handler, etc., carries a paper doodad like a slide rule, that gives instant computation from bushels to hundredweight to barrels. It's confusing to a novice.

Good potato land is now selling for $200 to $250 an acre, Carvell F. Foster, local potato expert for the Production and Marketing Administration, estimated. It is down about one-third from the $300 to $350 of a year ago, but better than double the prewar price.

The recent drop reflects the cut in potato price supports ordered by Agriculture Secretary Charles E. Brannan from 90 to 60 per cent of parity this year and the voluntary cut in acreage. It also reflects the evident anxiety of many growers that "Santa Claus won't live forever."

The sudden wealth that Government price supports has brought into the county has attracted the Internal Revenue Department. A score of income tax sleuths have been here for months. There are many tales of violations being quietly settled. One reached the courts recently and brought a judgment against a potato man for $100,000. Bank accounts are being closely scrutinized. Records of potato buyers are being examined.

D. C. Air Guard Machine-Guns Towed Targets

New Castle, Del., Aug. 15 (Spl.). The District Air National Guard took to the sky in earnest today with six flights firing live machine gun bullets at towed targets.

The District's Air Guard, comprising approximately 600 officers and men, is already settling down to simulated battle conditions continuing for a 15-day period until August 27, Col. Laidler B. Mackall, in command, said.

Participating units include: 113th Fighter Group Headquarters; 121st (White House) Squadron; 213th Air Service Group Headquarters; Detachment A, 213th Air service Group; 121st Utility Flight and 121st Weather Station.

Today's shooting was made possible by the lifting of an overcast sky which had yesterday forced the cancellation of other "live" practice.

Tonight, the guard's 78 Thunderbolts had their first taste of night formation flying of the maneuvers.

Meanwhile the 113th Fighter Group held its first pilots' briefing under the direction of Lieut. Col. Melvin C. Garlow, deputy commander.

The briefing was in preparation for Operation Readiness, a four-day maneuver to be conducted Friday through Monday with inspection by regular Air Force officers.

Plans for the operation were also discussed at Dover Air Force Base in a meeting of the various guard commanding officers. Those attending included Lieut. Col. L. B. Mackall, commanding officer of the 113th Group; Col. H. C. B. Clagett, commanding officer of the 213th Air Service Group; Maj. L. H. Waters, jr., commanding officer of the 149th Squadron, of Richmond, and Lieut. Col. J. R. Adams, commanding officer of the 142d Squadron, of Wilmington, Del.

Butler Denies Seeking Top Ship Subsidy

By the United Press

Col. Hugh B. Butler, research chief of the United States Maritime Commission, denied yesterday that he sought to fix the highest possible subsidy for construction of the proposed $70,373,000 super liner of the United States Lines.

The commission has announced it is underwriting $42,285, 784 of the vessel's total cost, to make up the difference between construction costs in United States and foreign shipyards and to pay for "national defense features."

Butler, who assembled data on comparative costs, was called before the House Committee on Expenditures to explain this line in a memorandum to members of his staff:

"Several spokesmen on a high level have indicated that we should get the lowest possible foreign estimate."

"Isn't it a fact," he was asked, "that the lower the foreign cost estimate is the higher the subsidy?"

"Yes, that's true." Butler replied, adding quickly, however, that this was "not the intent" of his memorandum.

"It was just badly worded," he said.

Asked for the names of those he referred to as "spokesmen on a high level," Butler said he "couldn't remember."

Independent NCPPC

The great principle which guided the Hoover Commission in its proposals for reorganization of the Government is the grouping of agencies performing the same or similar functions into major administrative units. The application of that principle has the warm indorsement of this newspaper. In some instances, however, the groupings finally recommended by the commission appear to have been casual and to lack sufficient recognition of the functions actually performed. That weakness may be especially noted in the recommendation that the National Capital Park and Planning Commission be placed under the Secretary of Works "for administrative purposes," against which the NCPPC's vice chairman, A. E. Demaray, has protested to the Senate Committee on Expenditures.

The NCPPC has a very specialized function. Its chief duty is to plan the future development of Washington and its environs. To be sure, that task is related to public works and certainly all governmental construction in the area of the Capital should conform to NCPPC recommendations. At the same time it is clear that the commission should not be subordinate to the proposed Secretary of Works or to any other agency that will be actively promoting public projects in the Capital. Apparently the Hoover Commission did not intend to deprive the NCPPC of its independence of judgment. Consequently, there is not much point in giving the proposed Secretary of Works any supervision over it.

The case for leaving the NCPPC independent is strengthened by the fact that the President and the Budget Bureau have already approved legislation reorganizing the agency on this basis. These bills are the result of a comprehensive study by the Budget Bureau. Only a compelling reason would justify abandonment of these plans, and no such compelling reason has been advanced.

Military Appointments

The two new appointments on the Joint Chiefs of Staff represent the best choices available in the military establishment. Both the new nonvoting chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, and the new Army Chief of Staff, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, are steeped in the American tradition. This is of immense importance at a time when the military have been hoisted to great power in our society and in our politics. A general's job in time of war is to fight and to lead, in time of peace it is to take orders. But the country is in a stage of no peace and no war, and, inevitably, the function of the military is to stay close to the policymakers. For foreign policy cannot achieve its aims without a mixture of strategy and statesmanship in which statesmanship is the dominant ingredient.

The country is fortunate that after the retirement of General Eisenhower there was General Bradley to take his place. After the renown he won on the battlefields of Europe, with which his name will be forever linked, Bradley deserved an honored retirement. But the needs of peace proved as clamant as those of war, and General Bradley, first as Veterans' Administrator and then as Army Chief of Staff, was called upon to stay in his country's service. Never one to shirk any duty, he cheerfully agreed, and in his postwar employment—as taxing as any in the Capital—he has been spectacularly adding to his stature. His appointment is a new one—created under the new Unification Act. It will be his job to make the Joint Chiefs of Staff a viable instrumentality, and we can think of no other man who has the quality to do it, as well as the requisite confidence of his associates in the Pentagon.

General Collins is General Bradley's old comrade-at-arms in France and has been his deputy in the Office of Chief of Staff. He is every inch a soldier, a man with a magnificent record on both the European and the Pacific fronts. The tabulation of his achievements looks like a fable in a book of adventure. After the war he learned something about public relations when he was put in charge of the Army's public relations. And he has shown an eagerness to inculcate among American officers everywhere their obligations to the American people. Nothing irks him more than any sign of the swashbuckling and arrogance which in some officers is supposed to reflect the new American power. In his new task he will need the kind of suppleness and flexibility which do not usually go with military commanders, but which are essential in a top administrative office. In this respect General Collins is fortunate in having as his civilian chief a man of the wisdom of Secretary Gray.

We know nothing about General Collins' ability as a high strategist, but, if ever there can be military harmony, the human material is available to achieve it in the new set-up of the Joint Chiefs. We welcome the appointments with the fervent hope that a real team will evolve out of the Bradley-Collins-Vandenberg-Denfeld combination.

German Results

Federalism has scored a victory in the elections in western Germany. This means that the first postwar government of Germany, unlike the first postwar government after the First World War, will be dominated by men who are neither nationalists nor centralists. Such an outcome will come as news of good report to Strasbourg. One of the issues in the minds of the representatives of the nations of Europe who are in session at the Council of Europe is the issue over Germany. Whether Germany is on the agenda of the Consultative Assembly is not clear from the dispatches. But the members have already shown an independence of the Council of Ministers which they should demonstrate before they adjourn in respect of Germany. Much time has been lost and many opportunities have been missed in healing the wounds of war and in establishing a real neighborhood in Europe devoted to progress and amity. The German elections demonstrate that there is a European feeling within Germany. It needs to be recognized and capitalized in the vital interests of the pacification and unity of Europe.

The leading Federalist Party in Germany is the Christian Democratic Party under the old burgomaster of Cologne, Konrad Adenauer, who will probably be Germany's first postwar Chancellor. Adenauer's party got 139 seats out of a total of 402. He will, of course, have to create a coalition, and he has a partner available, more or less of the political coloration of the Christian Democrats, in the new Free Democrats. The Free Democrats gained 52 seats. Headed by an old-fashioned Liberal, Theodore Heuss, the Free Democrats contain a baffling assortment of beliefs—some of them, alas, authoritarian—but these beliefs unite under the respected Heuss, and the dominant nexus is federalism. The two parties would muster 191 seats. However, with the members of the Assembly numbering 402, perhaps one or other of the round dozen splinter parties will be called upon to join the coalition. Certainly a working majority would seem to require a new government in command of more than the Christian Democrats and Free Democrats alone.

An unfortunate aspect of the election is the return of candidates subscribing to so many minor parties. Splinteration was the curse of the Weimar Republic. It might have been thought that the lesson of history in this respect would have been learned. But the German remains a German in his particularism. In spite of everything that is said about the "hunger for regimentation" in the average German, he has a local affiliation and an addiction to groupism, even in his politics. This spirit of locality, as John Stuart Mill called it, is, to be sure, damaging to the hope of developing a viable government over a wide area. Yet it has always been the reliance of those who, like this newspaper, have never ceased to plead for an Allied policy devoted to a federal solution for Germany—a solution, of course, which is the best foundation for reentry into the European community.

There had been so much appeal to nationalism in the campaigning that the result should be just as satisfactory to the West as the 6 per cent vote for communism. The latter result, in view of the fact that voting was held only in the Western zones, was to be expected, but there was dubiety over the nationalism vs. federalism issue, and the outcome in favor of federalism is a good beginning for the changed status in the relations between the Allies and the new Germany.

Symington's Show

Air Secretary Symington must by all odds be adjudged the winner in his verbal joust with Representative Van Zandt over the B-36 bomber. Mr. Symington met insults and innuendo with a combination of angry retort and studied indifference, and the result was to throw his adversary on the defensive. Mr. Van Zandt's case was not helped when he was forced to disclose to the House Armed Services Committee that his allegations of irregularities in B-36 procurement were founded on reports by such eminent military authorities as a Broadway columnist.

The smear aspect of the B-36 investigation was foreordained to failure because it was so flimsily grounded. It would have been incredibly stupid of Secretary Symington and Defense Secretary Johnson to participate in the outrageous contract favoritism of which they were accused. The attempt to impugn Mr. Symington's motives in backing the B-36 cannot be dissociated, of course, from the spite exhibited by certain Navy sources after Secretary Johnson's order canceling the supercarrier. Mr. Van Zandt's part as their spokesman is made circumstantially clear by his continual heckling of the Air Force and the fact that he is a naval reserve captain.

What has been advanced so far has been fabricated of rumor and is as full of holes as a Swiss cheese. No one has yet produced anything that can be classed as evidence to show that the determination to concentrate on the B-36 was not a decision honestly arrived at. On the contrary, the testimony of Air Force generals, some of whom had to be converted to the intercontinental bomber, indicates that they are sincerely convinced that the B-36 is the best plane presently available for the task envisaged.

This is not to say that there are no aspects about the B-36 which deserve investigation. So extravagant have been the claims for the bomber that the Air Force may have come to believe its own propaganda. The real question is not the integrity of B-36 contracts, but the use to be made of the bomber—in other words, the doctrine of strategic bombing and what seems to this newspaper an overemphasis on destruction of enemy populations. Assuredly this is a matter which deserves the fullest scrutiny by Congress as well as the National Security Council and Joint Chiefs of Staff before the country is irretrievably committed to this type of strategy. However, an objective examination will be hard to obtain in an atmosphere so full of partisan brickbats.

Exit Bramuglia

For a regime that has embarked on an avowed policy of fence-mending in Argentine-United States relations, the Peron administration has chosen a peculiar way to demonstrate its new-found affection. Argentine Foreign Minister Bramuglia, who has just been bounced from his job after a palace battle with Ambassador to Washington Remorino, has been, whether for reasons of conviction or of practical politics, a constant friend of the United States. He is an honest man in a sea of graft and intrigue, and has stood out as an exception to the anti-Yankeeism prevailing in Buenos Aires. It was Bramuglia who fought the blackmailing manipulations of Miguel Miranda, and this struggle brought him enemies, though not as many as he won among the jealous Argentines when he gathered kudos for his work as head of the U. N. Security Council when the Council was trying to mediate the Berlin dispute.

Even in a land of temperament, it is rare for a Foreign Minister to be ousted at the instance of an Ambassador. The key here seems to be the influence of Senora Peron. She hates Bramuglia, and her newspapers have continually sniped at him. Ambassador Remorino, on the other hand, has come to office as her protege. Commendably enough, he, too, has fought Miranda and has sought closer economic ties with the United States. But the fine hand of Evita has been galling to Bramuglia, and he has suspected Remorino of trying, with the senora's connivance, to get his job. Matters came to a head when Bramuglia biffed the Ambassador in the presence of President Peron and invited the challenge to a duel which has now been called off.

Forced to choose between love and diplomacy, Peron graciously gave in to the heroine and thus opened a new act in the comedy at the Casa Rosada. Appropriately enough, the successor to Bramuglia is a young law professor named Hipolito Jesus Paz. With a combination of love and peace as the theme, how can the play lose?

Palestine On Ice

The Security Council has by no means washed its hands of the Palestine situation by ending the embargo on arms shipments to the Arab states and Israel and simultaneously relieving Dr. Ralph Bunche of his duties as Palestine mediator. Palestine remains on the Council's agenda, the cease-fire order of July, 1948, is reaffirmed, armistice observers will continue to act for the Council and report to it, and the parties are directed to continue peace negotiations with the help of the U. N. Conciliation Commission now working at Lausanne. The Council's present action simply recognizes the progress that has been made in the job of pacification.

The ending of Dr. Bunche's services as mediator is merely a recognition that he succeeded brilliantly in working himself out of a job. With the signing of the Syrian armistice, the need for mediation to end the military phase came to an end. It must be a great satisfaction to Dr. Bunche that the Council voted unanimously in commendation of his efforts; unanimous votes in the Security Council are not the regular rule, particularly on Palestine.

The ending of the arms embargo is perhaps in a different category. The danger that it might open the way to an armament race was pointed out by the Israeli delegate and acknowledged by other delegates. The "moral embargo" that replaces it is simply a series of pledges by the United States, Great Britain and France that they will not export arms to the area in excess of internal security needs. What are internal security needs?

Van Horn Resignation

Ezra Van Horn's resignation of the chairmanship of the negotiating committee of the northern and western bituminous coal operators is not a surprise. Mr. Van Horn's usefulness in that capacity vanished when he accepted a salary of $35,000 as trustee for the UMW pension fund. Since union demands for increased contributions to the pension fund are expected to figure largely in discussions of a new wage contract, an individual who is drawing a fat salary for his services as an administrator of the pension fund is likely to favor union demands for the perpetuation and strengthening of that fund. In any case his motives are suspect, and self-interest disqualifies him as a representative of the operators in wage negotiations.

Our hope is that the force of an outraged public opinion will compel both Mr. Van Horn and Senator Bridges to resign their positions as trustees of the pension fund. Not only are these payments excessive; they are also being made to men whose duties may conflict with their selfish interest as salaried employes of the pension fund.

Cleanup

How gratifying it is to learn that certain of Washington's citizenry have discovered an important problem to which they can direct their attention. I refer to the apparently successful efforts to "clean up" a show being produced at the Meridian Hill Theater.

Much of the credit must go, of course, to the able, albeit none too eager, assistance of the Washington Police Department, but it is to those who discovered the existence of this terrible evil that our thanks must go. Their perspicacity in discovering this one vital issue among many lesser ones such as, for example, slum clearance, sufferage and public health, is astounding.

It takes great and rare wisdom such as they must possess to realize that the welfare of the community depends less on whether the inhabitants of the District have no say in their local government or that many of them live in squalor and must go without the most basic elements of medical care than it does on whether an actor reading the lines of a play utters a few profane words.

May I suggest that more of us divert our efforts in this direction. I'm going to read a book. If I find a h—— or a d—— therein I shall rush to the police with the awful news.

D. J. BERKEMEYER.
Washington.

I read with amazement the story of the Meridian Hill play "cleanup." The absurdity of arresting an actor for speaking the lines of his play! The smothering stuffiness of the Victorian era apparently still lives.

Who are these people who set themselves up to judge right, wrong and morality in a play? Must our art be ruled by self-appointed deities who insist on dictation over artists, writers and their audiences? They will go next to the National Art Gallery to demand changes in or removals of paintings that do not suit their personal taste.

I would like to suggest that those who have such delicate feelings that they cannot face the realities of life (which include poor taste as well as good) stay away from artistic expression that they do not like. Each individual in a democracy must have complete freedom of choice in selection of books, radio programs, plays and music. There is no more validity in American condemnation of "dirty" language as immoral, than of Soviet condemnation of bourgeois music, as unfit. We must remember, there are enough different plays to suit every taste.

STANLEY BERNARD.

Alaskan Defense

Gov. Ernest Gruening of Alaska has sent a telegram to all members of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees and other members concerned relative to the necessity of having Congress act at this session on the military public works bill, H. R. 4766.

That bill was reported to the House on July 25 and includes authorization for the 1950 fiscal year construction program within and without the continental United States for the Army, Navy and Air Force. The bill calls for a total authorization of $613,800,000 of which an amount in excess of 130 million dollars is earmarked for Alaska.

Despite the fact that the House Committee has reported the bill favorably, Chairman Carl Vinson announced the last part of July that no action would be taken in the House on this bill this year. It is not clear whose decision is responsible for this sudden announcement but it is known what effect such action will have on the defense installations in Alaska.

Governor Gruening's warning as set forth in his telegram should not be ignored. If this authorization bill is not enacted this year it will mean the complete breakdown of national defense construction in the Territory for a year or more. Authorization of the projects and appropriation of at least some of the money is needed by January of 1950 in order to complete designs for the public works and to lay in supplies in preparation of the construction season ahead. I join with Governor Gruening in stressing the grave implications inherent in the deferment of this program.

E. L. BARTLETT.
Delegate from Alaska.
Washington.

Unwed Mothers

It is gratifying to note that your current series on unwed mothers has begun with a remedial attitude rather than one of mere passionate revelation.

There is indeed no such creature as an "illegitimate" child—but rather "illegitimate" parents (and only they can technically be termed so by the lawful dictates of man), for it is not in the least the will of a child that he be born into a world whose false sense of morals and hypocritical codes forever brand him as an "illegitimate." Nor is it the desire of the parent that in preknowledge, she bear her child out of wedlock, thus exposing him to the stigma, and herself to the disrepute so frequently engendered by unwedded births.

Miss Andrews is profound in her reasoning that emotional deprivation contributes substantially to the cases of unwed mothers. But economic insecurity cannot be held an unlikely cause and certainly not lightly considered as an undesirable aftermath.

CHESTINE EVERETT.
Washington.

Welfare Paradox

In a well reasoned article (August 11) Mrs. Agnes E. Meyer poses the question: Why does the American Medical Association persist in its reactionary opposition to the President's Reorganization Plan No. 1? Unquestionably health, education and social security are inseparably related problems of the Nation's general welfare. Under a single administrative leadership with access to the Chief Executive this proposed department of welfare could make democracy work. Healthy bodies with superior intelligence and an alert social conscience can contain communism. Why not effectuate it?

The honest answer is a challenging historical paradox. Our President is right in fighting for this sensible reorganization which consolidates related functions under a single purposeful plenary leadership. Our AMA can make a good case in playing the devil's advocate.

The grim warning of elder statesman Herbert Hoover explains the paradox: We are on the last mile to collectivism. Debt, bureaucracy and deficit spending is sounding the death knell to individual dignity and private competitive enterprise. Can we surrender anything more to Government and remain a free people?

Our President must see and respect organized medicine's irreconcilable objection to Oscar R. Ewing. There is nothing about his improvident political opportunism to assure us that his appointment will not hasten the collectivist state. Likewise organized medicine must see the job is too big for a mere doctor. We would not gain in prestige to have a political M.D. to head the healing arts.

Our crying need is for a doctor of the humanities. He should see power as the obedient servant of all the people. Our great centers of learning provide such savants who are master administrators as well as master scientists and philosophers.

THOMAS E. MATTINGLY, M.D.
Washington.

Atomic Energy Fellowships

On August 2 the Senate, despite strong protests from scientific and educational organizations, passed the O'Mahoney rider requiring FBI investigation of all holders of Atomic Energy Commission fellowships, whether or not they have access to secret information. It appears that the bill will now go on to become law.

The dangerous precedent established in this legislation requires reevaluation of the entire AEC fellowship program. The Federation of American Scientists approved and supported the program as originally conceived by the AEC and ably administered by the National Research Council. But thought control in the field of scientific education, so clearly initiated in the O'Mahoney rider, is too high a price to pay for continuance of the program in its present form. FBI investigations should be limited to those individuals who are engaged in secret work essential to the Nation's military security. It must not be permitted to spread to science and education in general. The Federation of American Scientists therefore recommends:

1. The AEC should cease awarding fellowships to individuals not engaged in secret research. It should confine its fellowship program to the narrow objective of training for research in weapons development.

2. The National Research Council should discontinue administration of the AEC fellowship program since its purposes must now be regarded as primarily technological rather than scientific. The NRC should, however, continue to advise the AEC on the general aspects of its program as requested.

3. The House Rules Committee should, without delay, report out the National Science Foundation bill which it has been holding for over two months. The National Science Foundation must make up the deficit in support to the basic sciences and education which the O'Mahoney rider has imposed. The bill should be altered so as to guarantee that basic research will be kept free of restrictions by secrecy or political considerations. The Foundation should be instructed not to give continuing support to secret research and to impose no condition other than that applicants be law-abiding and possess the necessary scientific competence to qualify for its fellowships.

The Federation regrets the necessity for making these recommendations which represent a setback for effective cooperation of science and government. But in these troubled times, democracy rests heavily on the strength of its science. And we are convinced that the effectiveness of our science depends upon the strength of our democracy. Loyalty investigation of students of science engaged in non-secret work is a threat to both.

HUGH C. WOLFE,
Chairman, Federation of American Scientists.

The Vaughan Story

MAJ. GEN. Harry H. Vaughan, the President's military aide, is an ideal target for these hot weather days in the political shooting gallery. He is big, bumptious, loud, bespangled with medals.

His capacity to put his foot in his mouth appears to be unlimited. The outsider, hearing the ping, ping, ping as the congressional sharpshooters hit the target, wonders why the President tolerates him.

This is an inside view. It is the explanation of those who have watched Vaughan develop into a front-page figure to the intense discomfiture of all concerned, including and most particularly the general himself.

You begin with the Vaughan temperament. Vaughan displays to his intimates the good-natured friendliness of a Newfoundland dog. He wants to be patted, to be admired, and the only difficulty is that now and then he thinks he is a lap dog.

As secretary and chief assistant to Truman when he was in the Senate, Vaughan was useful and unfailingly loyal. When constituents from Missouri came in to complain that they were getting the run-around from this bureau or that agency, Vaughan would get on the phone and fix it up. He suggests, in fact, a rather common type in the maize of bureaucratic Washington—the good guy who knows the right people and who for a price, or, maybe, for nothing at all but a lot of gratitude, a few drinks and a good dinner, can solve your little problem.

Translated to the White House, Vaughan found himself in an element that was at first not to his liking. The office of military aide is an empty one, its function being largely ceremonial. The general had a lot of time on his hands.

AS WITH everyone else near the seat of power, Vaughan found himself importuned by former friends seeking favors out of Government. He might properly have replied, as did others in the President's official family, that he had no business intervening in this or that department.

But the general was almost always ready to go to bat for a friend. That word soon got around Washington, and so friends and friends of friends in increasing numbers put the touch on the general.

The President is convinced that Vaughan has never taken money or even any substantial "gifts" for his intervention. If the President is proved wrong in this conviction, then his military aide will quickly move out of the White House.

The deep freeze that made the headlines is an interesting example. Vaughan's friend, John Maragon, the Greek-American from Kansas City, persuaded the general the deep freeze would be useful in the commissary established by the White House staff shortly after Truman became President. Why, sure, the general allowed, it might be useful. The boys had fixed up a lunchroom so they wouldn't have to take time to go outside for lunch at noon. That is where the deep freeze is today—in the White House commissary operated by the staff. And, while he was about it, the general thought it would be nice to give four other freezers to his pals.

VAUGHAN'S activities have caused his chief frequent concern. Three times the President asked his military aide not to bring Maragon into the White House.

But Vaughan is not one to squelch easily. An ambitious man, he saw others around the President being built up in the press. He has the same kind of loyalty to old friends that Mr. Truman has.

So the telephone calls continued. "This is General Vaughan at the White House. I've got Joe Doakes sitting here in my office and he tells me that . . ."

While it may differ in kind, this form of activity is not substantially unlike the activity of President Roosevelt's aides in the palmy days of the New Deal. Part of it is the simple political formula of rewarding your friends and punishing your enemies.

Two years ago the hot weather shooting gallery was the Howard Hughes investigation. With the aid and advice of a highly paid publicity firm, Hughes turned the tables on the investigators and one of the prime targets became Senator Owen Brewster of Maine, who was alleged to have been given free rides by Pan-American Airways and to have taken other perquisites for favors done. The danger is that with these repeated cries of alarm, the public may finally become indifferent and when something really important, like a Teapot Dome, is uncovered, the significance of it will be missed.

"Morals vs. Friendship"

Your August 13 editorial on "Morals vs. Friendship" tempts one to ask whether the time has not come for a new loyalty purge, this one based on the principle that loyalty to cronies should not supersede the larger loyalty one owes to the best interests of the Nation as a whole. Blind loyalty to a political boss whom the Government finally had to put in jail, or to a "coordinator of veteran affairs" who diverted scarce building materials from veterans' housing to racetrack extension, is unpleasantly suggestive of the "honor among thieves" which frequently defeats the ends of justice. # Maker Sold Public Same Freezers

Truman of any impropriety in the deep-freeze business. McCarthy said he was sure she was incapable of doing anything improper, and added:

"I don't think she knew anything about the perfume company's connection with John Maragon. I am sure, for example, she knew nothing about the attempted smuggling activities on the part of an employe of this company."

Maragon, who was a globe-trotting representative for the Verley Co., has described General Vaughan as his "good friend." He is to be called as a witness later, as is General Vaughan.

Exploring Relationship

The Senate subcommittee, at its hearing yesterday, was exploring the relationship between Gen. Alden H. Waitt, recently suspended chief of the Army Chemical Corps, and James V. Hunt, the high-fee "management counselor."

It was brought out last week that General Waitt used Hunt's office in the Barr Building here to dictate a series of commentaries on fellow officers who were eligible to succeed him. The commentaries, which one Senator described as a throat-cutting job by Waitt, were delivered to General Vaughan's office at the White House.

It was brought out last week, also, that General Waitt was in communication with Hunt about a possible $20,000 Army contract for the Deering-Miliken Research Trust of Greenwich, Conn. Hunt was Washington representative for Deering-Milliken.

Tells of Visit by Gay

The first witness yesterday in this connection was Col. John A. MacLaughlin, commanding officer of the Chemical Corps Technical Command at Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland.

He told of a visit paid him by Maj. John F. Gay, a liaison officer in the Chemical Corps, who reported that General Waitt was interested in the contract sought by Deering-Milliken, which had to do with measuring the air flow through clothing.

Colonel MacLaughlin testified:

"Major Gay said that the White House was putting pressure on General Waitt to find out the status of the negotiations that might or might not lead to a contract."

Major Gay, who is now taking a special course at the University of Wisconsin, gave somewhat different testimony. He told how General Waitt called him in and told him that he was interested in seeing that Deering-Milliken got some work from the Government.

"He said something about Deering-Milliken having influence at the White House that might prove valuable to him," Gay testified.

General Waitt walked into Room 357 of the Senate Office Building while the hearing was in progress. He was in uniform, his tunic bright with four rows of decorations and campaign ribbons. A short, wiry man, he looked as if he had been under a strain.

Not Until He Testifies

Asked by reporters for a statement, General Waitt smiled and said he would keep quiet until called to testify. This may be today.

The closed-door session of the subcommittee was held in the afternoon in the Capitol office of Leslie Biffle, secretary of the Senate. Among those interviewed, besides Gross and Hoffman, were Robert Quirk, vice president of a Cudahy (Wis.) firm, that supplied Gross with the cabinets for his freezers, and Fred B. Wright of Milwaukee, Hoffman's attorney.

Attorney Wright told reporters that he and Hoffman had been asked not to make statements, but he did say that "no one had asked any embarrassing questions."

Questioned About Trip

He disclosed, too, that Hoffman had been questioned about a trip he made to Europe in 1945 with John Maragon.

Quirk told reporters that the cabinets he supplied Gross for the deep-freeze units were good ones and certainly had commercial value.

Gross said that the freezers were in demand at the time.

"They were of wartime, substitute materials," he said, "but everybody wanted them, whether they were made of mud, or brick, or what."

All of those questioned in executive session were told that they could return to Wisconsin. Apparently, their testimony, if used at all, will be read from the stenographic transcript.

The deep freezer case took a new turn yesterday. A prominent Wisconsin Republican also got one of the now-famous Gross freezers, it was learned—but not as a gift.

He is Thomas E. Coleman, of Madison, former Republican State chairman and now an official of the party's national finance committee.

Reached by telephone, Coleman was asked: "Is it true you also have a Gross deep freezer like the ones Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan says he received as gifts from two old friends and passed along to Mrs. Truman and other White House officials?"

"Sure, I got one of the same freezers late in 1944," Coleman said. "But I'm just a Republican. Mine cost me $517."

'Nothing Sinister,' Says Bennett's Attorney

Saugatuck, Mich., Aug. 15 (U.P.). There was "nothing sinister or unusual" about the gift of expensive deep freeze units to high Washington officials, the attorney for perfume-maker David Bennett said today.

Joseph H. Kraus said "no favors were asked by Mr. Bennett of Gen. (Harry) Vaughan," one of the recipients of the units.

"These freezers were given as a courtesy and given as gifts of esteem to friends of Bennett, among them Vaughan," Kraus said. "The thought was suggested by Bennett's public relations counsel and by me."

Unwanted Girl Easy Prey

She was so unsure of affection or support from her own family that she went to any lengths to get affection from the youths she knew. If they laughed at her when she refrained from "petting," she would give in, for fear of losing them.

When, at the age of 17, Deborah became pregnant, her defiance mounted to a stubborn conviction that, fortuitously, this was a means of punishing her father for his lack of understanding.

By the time the baby came, the subconscious deprivation and conscious rebellion had so merged that Deborah was determined to keep the child. Not because it would be best for the child, but so she could take it back to the town in which she lived, and bring lasting disgrace on the H. family—particularly her father.

That she was persuaded to change her mind, that her plan finally included going to a new community, and finding both employment and a new mode of living there, are indications that Deborah at least got a boost to a more well-adjusted life. Whether she will remain on a stable emotional keel, and find wholesome affection now that she is finally on her own—this is Deborah's problem.

The social worker thinks Deborah has a pretty good chance of working out her future. She isn't really "bad"; just mixed up. When she understood the causes for her rebellion—her refusal to conform—it gave her a new focus on her whole emotional problem. Now she can try to be constructive instead of destructive.

The punishment theme—whether of parent or sister or brother—threads the histories of unwed mothers. But there are other forms emotional deprivati takes.

One of these is twisted together from the lives of a widower, with six children, and his eldest daughter.

This man, whom we shall call Mr. A., held three jobs, worked 18 hours daily, to support his children. His wife had died two years ago and his oldest daughter, Martha, was now 16.

Martha was a hard worker, at home and at school. Her grades were good; she was already interested in becoming a nurse. For this profession she was well qualified. She had nursed her five younger brothers and sisters in illness; she had bathed and dressed them, and cajoled them i to eating their cereal and washing behind their ears.

But there was something else. Mr. A. was always turning to his daughter, Martha, for aid and counsel, as he would have to his wife. This pseudo-marital relation, from which only sex relations were missing, was almost too sexually stimulating for Martha.

Unconsciously she went outside the home, seeking to complete the picture of domesticity which the father-daughter relationship had partially produced. The father of her child was a boy she had known since childhood. When the child came, the boy's mother adopted it, and Martha left home to begin a career in nursing.

A social worker will tell you that if you can dig deep enough into a girl's past—if she is willing to help by remembering the things that have been important to her—your chances of helping her to reach a normal adjustment are accentuated.

The girl may be just average, from a home as near the middle as John Q. Public must have. Or she may be a girl like Ingrid, only child in the well-to-do M. family in a small Iowa town.

When she was still small, Ingrid's exceptional ability as a violinist already was evident. Her mother became almost obsessed with the idea that some day her daughter should be a concert musician.

Ingrid, who loved music, might have made herself and her mother happy, but for one thing. When she went off to college she fell in love. And Bill fell in love with her. Then Bill, who was in the service, had to spend a year overseas.

During the interval, Mrs. M. pushed her cause strenuously. Ingrid was in school concerts; she was given extra instruction. A New York audition was arranged.

The audition date conflicted with the date of Bill's return from overseas, but Mrs. M. insisted that the New York engagement be kept.

Ingrid respected her mother's wishes, but when she returned from New York, with a promise of a contract when she finished college, she wanted only one thing: to see Bill.

Bill had gotten a job in a town about 70 miles from Ingrid's home. She went there on a visit.

There was no Mrs. M. on hand to talk about Ingrid's career; no restraining influence. Bill and Ingrid "jumped the gun."

Ingrid went back to college the next fall. She tried to deny the symptoms of pregnancy when they began to appear. She tried to bury the whole experience in her mind. When she went home for spring vacation, her mother knew she was pregnant.

Ingrid hadn't told Bill. It was Mrs. M. who finally got in touch with him, told him about the pregnancy. Bill was angry because the news came late; because it came from Mrs. M. instead of Ingrid. He became hostile. Mrs M. seemed to build his antagonism. Finally, the engagement was broken.

Ingrid came to Washington to have her child. Mr. and Mrs. M. paid all the expenses of the accouchement. When the baby came Ingrid released it for adoption—because her mother wanted it that way. And to Ingrid this seemed the only way to compensate to her parents for the unhappiness she had caused them.

When she left Washington she was determined to go on with her music. She felt that her parents had been so understanding that she owed them success as a violinist.

But it was really Mrs. M., rather than Ingrid, who needed help in interpreting what had caused her daughter's problem. With the help of the social worker she got an insight into this, and was better prepared to help Ingrid meet her future.

Public Enemy Held In Slaying, Robbery

Held in $50,000 As Swindler

DUSTEAN A. YOUNGS,
described by the FBI as one of the slickest confidence men in the country, said before the Federal Commissioner in Birmingham that he couldn't post even $500 bail, but his bond remained fixed at $50,000. Youngs is accused of a series of swindles in the South; the FBI charges he got more than $80,000 in Atlanta

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 15 (AP)—A man accused as a slayer and bank robber, and his wife, were held under heavy guard here today after a wild gun battle which ended in the death of a Louisville policeman. Another policeman was critically wounded and a second man was arrested as a bank robber accomplice.

FBI officials and Louisville police identified the trio as:

Earl D. Bircham, 45, three-time prison escapee and "notorious public enemy" whose criminal record dates back to 1931. He was charged with the murder of Patrolman John H. Tennyson, 32, and malicious shooting.

Mrs. June Bircham, 26. She was charged with being an accomplice.

William Curtis Pierce, 26, arrested later in his Louisville apartment on a bank robbery charge.

The two policemen were shot down last night after an automobile chase from the downtown area. They had attempted to stop the Bircham auto for speeding.

Patrolman John A. Ross, 22, was taken to a hospital with two bullet wounds below the heart. His condition was reported as serious.

The auto chase ended when Bircham's car hit a tree. He fled but his wife was seized in the car.

Pierce, a Louisville filling station attendant, was charged in the robbery of a bank at Nashville, Tenn., in a complaint filed before a United States District Court judge of Nashville today. The bank was robbed of $25,498 in a daylight holdup on August 1.

Bircham was charged with the bank robbery in a warrant issued August 10.

The accused slayer today admitted, police said, the $8000 holdup of the J. C. Penney store at Montgomery, Ala., last July 14.

Negro Leader Says

Chemical May Whiten Black Skin

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—A chemical that sometimes turns skin from black to white may make it possible "to conquer the color line," says Walter White, Negro leader, in Look magazine published Tuesday.

The chemical, dangerous to use, was discovered shortly before the war, he writes. Some Negro and Mexican workers in a tannery found that their hands and arms were turning white.

This effect was traced to the chemical, monobenzyl ether of hydroquinone, with which their rubber gloves had been treated.

Scientists found the chemical removes a skin pigment, melanin, White said. Negroes have much more melanin than white people.

Melanin is involved in the suntanning of white skin.

White warns the chemical may poison people, causing pain, anemia, convulsions or even death. Its effect on the skin is temporary, changing the color for from six months to a year.

But White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, predicts further experiments will make the chemical safe to use.

"The racial, social, economic and political consequences would be tremendous," he adds.

(A New York skin specialist told the Associated Press "nobody can turn white from using the drug at present." Attempts to change the color of skin have not been successful, he said. Most of the workers who wore the rubber gloves had patchy whiteness on their hands and arms, not an even change in color.

(Also, he said, skin specialists are not yet agreed whether it is melanin, or some chemical from which it's made, or some change in melanin that is responsible for skin pigmentation.)

Public Works Urged to Stem Depressions

Toronto, Aug. 15 (AP).—The American Federation of Labor's executive council today called on the United States Congress to prepare a backlog of public works projects for use in stemming regional depressions.

The council, holding its quarterly meeting in this Ontario capital, also urged that Congress approve pending legislation to encourage building of "moderate-rental" apartments for families just above the low-income group.

While urging that Congress take action to combat a depression, the executive of the eight-million-member AFL emphasized it did not consider that a depression was at hand now, even though unemployment had risen above the four million mark for the first time since before the war.

25 Mothers Ask Krug to Reopen Pool to All Races

A group of about 25 white and Negro mothers from the Anacostia and Congress Heights areas yesterday asked Interior Secretary J. A. Krug to "reopen the Anacostia pool on a nonsegregated basis."

They presented a letter for Krug to National Capital Parks Superintendent Irving C. Root. The group said it expected "determined enforcement" of Interior's nonsegregation policy, with supervision "of an adequate and fully trained police force, composed of obth white and Negro officers, prepared to quell any attempted hoodlumism."

Anacostia pool has been closed since June 29. Efforts to reach an agreement for turning it and five other Interior-controlled pools over to the District Recreation Board so far have failed.

Moose Plan Research on The Elderly

San Francisco, Aug. 15 (AP).—Must elderly people be put on the shelf, their usefulness gone?

The Loyal Order of Moose is setting up a laboratory to find out.

Malcolm R. Giles, executive director of the Moose, reported to the national convention today the Mooseheart Research Laboratory for Gerontology and Geriatrics will be established at Moosehaven, Orange Park, Fla., September 15.

(Gerontology is the scientific study of old age. Geriatrics is the branch of medicine dealing with diseases attending old age.)

Giles said Dr. Robert W. Kleemeier, 33, assistant professor of psychology at Northwestern University, will direct the laboratory.

Giles indicated studies are expected eventually to suggest now to utilize the capabilities of elderly persons.

"If, for example, a regression occurs in the learning process of a person past 65, unrelated to physical disturbances," Giles said, "This laboratory will attempt to determine whether the rate of decline can be retarded, and whether these people can be taught actually to increase their usefulness to themselves and to society."

Imprisonment Of Wife Laid To Ex-Barber

Camden, Tenn., Aug. 15 (AP).—A retired barber, accused of holding his wife prisoner for 10 weeks on near-starvation rations, was jailed today.

Mrs. Lyons

Sheriff Ray Ray Lewis placed charges of attempted murder and inhuman treatment against Numa Lyont, 45.

His wife, Mrs. Ida Lyons, 42, was reported in favorable condition. She had wasted away to 75 pounds from her normal weight of 125 pounds.

The woman said her husband barred the windows and door of a room in their four-room rural house and kept her there. Besides putting her on a diet of bread, potatoes and water, she said, he terrorized her by suspending a sheet-covered dummy from the rafters.

Neighbors said the couple had quarrelled frequently and that they had heard a number of "disturbances" going on in the Lyons household.

Famed Epitaph Placed on Grave Of Al Shean

New York, Aug. 15 (AP).—The trade-mark line—"Absolutely, Mr. Gallagher? Positively, Mr. Shean"—that Al Shean helped make famous in life will be inscribed on his tombstone.

Lawrence Shean, son of the 81-year-old actor disclosed today that the famed trouper had directed this epitaph be placed on the stone: "Born May 12, 1868. I could have lived longer, but now it's too late. Absolutely, Mr. Gallegher? Positively, Mr. Shean."

Shean, who died Friday, was buried today after services at Riverside Memorial Chapel.

Ohio Firm to Get New RFC Loan, Rep. Cole Says

By The Associated Press

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is prepared to lend another $14,500,000 to the Lustron Corp. of Columbus, Ohio, Representative Cole (R., Kans.) said yesterday.

He told a reported he had obtained this information from top RFC officials with whom he conferred in the course of a congressional investigation of RFC loans to Lustron which already total $35,500,000.

Carl G. Strandlund, Lustron president, told an interviewer today he expects the additional $14,500,000 will be needed to place the company "on a money making basis." Lustron makes prefabricated houses.

There was no immediate comment by the RFC.

Broschart Probes Death of Woman

The death of a 31-year-old Bethesda housewife was being investigated yesterday by Dr. Frank J. Broschart, Montgomery County Medical Examiner.

Police listed the dead woman as Mrs. Louise Baxter Mills. They said they were called to her home, 136 Glenbrook rd., by a private physician shortly after she died at 10:45 a.m. yesterday.

Dr. Broschart said he would hold up a death certificate until the cause of death could be determined by laboratory tests.

Ex-Senate Chaplain's Portrait to Be Shown

A new portrait of the late Dr. Peter Marshall, former chaplain of the Senate, will be shown for the first time at a luncheon Wednesday at 1 p. m. in the Vandenburg room of the Senate.

The picture was painted by Miss Roma Harlan of Lafayette, Ind. Senator Homer Capehart (R., Ind.), who is making the arrangements, has invited Mrs. Marshall, several members of the Senate and officials of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, of which Dr. Marshall was pastor, to attend the luncheon.

Promotion Tests Slated For D.C. Police

Examinations for promotion in the Metropolitan Police Department, the first in two years, will be given by the Civil Service Commission "late in October," it was announced yesterday.

Final filing date for applications will be September 16.

From the examinations, the commission will make up new promotion lists which will supersede the ones now in effect.

Inspector Floyd A. Truscott, acting chief in the absence of Maj. Robert J. Barrett, announced the examinations in an order yesterday to the department.

Men eligible may take examinations for promotion to corporal, sergeant, lieutenant, and captain. Certain length of service is required for promotion to each of the grades, both in the department and in the next lower grade.

In cases of ties, special qualifications are considered, including gold and silver medals and the bronze bar for meritorious service, recognition as policeman of the month, seniority in grade, and seniority in the department, in that order.

The applicants for promotion, Inspector Truscott's order said, "will be rated on the basis of experience, fitness, and practical questions. The questions will be based on the Police manual, Police regulations, traffic regulations, and certain sections of the District Code.

Quick-Thinking Phone Caller Aids Stricken Pastor

A Bethesda minister, who suffered a stroke while having a telephone conversation, got quick treatment yesterday when the woman on the other end of the line called the Bethesda-Chevy Chase rescue squad.

The unidentified woman reported only that she had been talking over the phone with the Rev. Claude A. Brubaker, pastor of the Little Church in the Wildwood, 2350 Old Georgetown rd., when suddenly he stopped talking.

The rescue squad, hurrying out to his home adjoining the church, took the minister to Suburban Hospital, where attendants said he had suffered a "cerebral baso spasm." He was in a satisfactory condition last night, but was not allowed visitors.

Distinctive "Limousine Ride"—triple-cushioned by Packard's costly "self-controlling" suspension system.

Distinctive, precision-built quality—safeguarded by 4,287 major inspections per car. Quality note: Of all the Packards built—in the last 50 years—over 50% are still in service!

And all this distinction is yours at a price that's less than for many lighter-built, lower-powered eights . . . less, even than for some of today's sixes!

The moral, of course, is: Now that you're so close to the price of a Packard—why not own one!

ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

Extra value note: All prices include fender shields, fore-and-aft direction signals, courtesy and trunk lights, electric clock and cigarette lighter, "comfort-selector" seat cushion springs . . . many other extras.

3 Men Beat Son of Slain Newscaster

BURT MASON
Vows he'll carry on . . .

Houston, Tex., Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Burt Mason, 22-year-old son of W. H. (Bill) Mason, newscaster shot to death at Alice, Tex., while conducting an anti-vice crusade, was in a hospital here tonight suffering from severe injuries received in a beating early yesterday.

Young Mason, however, said he believed there was no connection between his father's crusade and his beating by three men. The young man is continuing his father's crusade in daily remote control broadcasts in Corpus Christi, Tex.

Mason said he and a girl friend visited Houston Saturday night and were returning to Alice early Sunday when the beating occurred. He said he stopped at a signal light and three men in another car pulled alongside.

He said they pulled him from the car and struck him with their fists. He said he knocked out one of the youths and drove away but that the trio overtook him again. He was knocked unconscious. He suffered a fractured skull, broken left leg, cuts and bruises on the face and head and a battered left jaw.

Mason said he did not know the men, nor could he account for their attack.

His father was shot to death July 29. Sam Smithwick, a deputy sheriff, surrendered immediately after the shooting and is now awaiting grand jury action.

An attempt was made early yesterday to burn a club in Alice, known as Rancho Alegro, which the elder Mason charged Smithwick owned. Mason had called it a house of vice.

Slain Man's Pals Aid Defense of His Accused Wife

Mrs. Ruth Maxwell, held in Alexandria Jail on a charge of murdering her husband, has received a $47 defense fund contribution from friends of the man she is accused of slaying.

Her attorney, Walter I. Young, yesterday disclosed receipt of the contribution from Army buddies of Corpl. Gardner Maxwell, 30, who died of a severed jugular vein after an altercation with his wife in front of their Alexandria rooming house on July 30. Mrs. Maxwell, held without bond pending grand jury action, has pleaded innocent to the murder charge on grounds of self-defense.

Young said the soldiers, all noncommissioned officers in Maxwell's battalion at Fort Belvoir, originally had collected $62 to buy flowers for Maxwell's funeral. When they learned Mrs. Maxwell was without funds, the attorney said, they agreed to spend $15 for flowers and send the remainder to Mrs. Maxwell to aid her defense.

9 Die, 49 Saved From Airliner

the skies where the Skymaster was wandering.

Help was rallied while the plane was still in the air.

Big ocean-hopping planes of at least three other airlines and two little surface ships struggled in the pre-dawn darkness to assist the craft and rescue survivors.

The survivors were picked up at dawn by the British trawler Stahlberg and the Irish freighter Lanahrone and brought here by the Stahlberg.

Alerted to watch for the lost skymaster when it failed to find Shannon for refueling while enroute from Rome to the United States, other pilots rallied around in the air. One tried to lead it back to Ireland, then dropped flares and life-saving equipment and finally directed the surface craft to the floating survivors.

Miss Nichols, who in 1935 survived a crash in New York of a plane she intended to fly across the Atlantic, came ashore here barefoot but unhurt.

"When the plane hit I escaped out a hatch," she said.

Altogether Miss Nichols reckoned she has survived six plane crackups.

The 47 Italians were en route to Caracas, Veneuela, viaz Transocean's home airport in Connecticut.

The plane got lost just before last midnight on the Rome-Shannon leg of the flight when atmospheric conditions blacked out radio communication and crippled its navigation equipment.

Transocean President Orvis Nelson, who chanced to be in Shannon on an inspection tour and planned to go home in the lost plane, said eight passengers and the radio officer, Herbert (Jack) Asbel, Brooklyn, N. Y., were drowned or lost during the rescue operations.

Asbel died after he and other crewmen helped passengers escape.

Capt. Edward Bessey of Weatherfield, Conn., said his plane left Rome with enough fuel reserve to fly three hours beyond Shannon.

"But it was all gone," he said, after missing Shannon, "and so I sent word back to prepare for ditching."

Bessey said the people who died were those "who failed to carry out instructions. Some jumped into the water and these were the people who were lost."

Survivors said there was no panic among the Italian passengers.

The plane's second officer, J. W. Moore of Windsor Locks, Conn., said waves knocked off the tail but the big airliner floated at least 15 minutes, giving plenty of time to inflate liferafts.

"If the passengers had understood English I don't think anyone would have been lost," Moore said.

In addition to Bessey, Asbel, Moore and Miss Nichols, the Americans on the ditched plane were James Bowman, navigator; Richard Hall, co-pilot; Moore, second officer; Ralph Fisher, purser; Robert Thomas, flight commander; Luigina Cerabona, second stewardess, and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Derr, San Lorenzo, Calif., both company employes.

Western Roads Freight Declared Off 14 Per Cent

By the United Press

Arthur E. Stoddard, president of the Union Pacific Railroad, said yesterday the freight business of western railroads is off 14 to 15 per cent, with nothing to indicate it is going to pick up.

He also reported that his line's passenger traffic is down 22 per cent because "people are not spending their money for long trips" to and from the West Coast.

Stoddard gave a report on railroad business conditions, especially in the West, in a copyrighted interview in United States News and World Report, weekly news magazine published here.

U. S. Nets Tidy Profit on Loan In Slump Era

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Government has earned a tidy profit and received back more than 99 per cent of an investment made in the depression period of the 1930s.

LaRoque

The total investment of $273,156,000 has been reduced by retirements to $1,951,800 on July 31, according to O. K. LaRoque, acting chairman of the Home Loan Bank Board.

Authorized by Congress in 1933 and 1935, the Treasury Department and the Home Owners' Loan Corp. placed $49,300,000 and $223,856,710, respectively, in the share capital of more than 1400 member associations of the Federal Home Loan Bank System. Most of the investments were made in 1935 and 1937 to enable these local home financing associations more quickly to resume normal lending for the construction, purchase and reconditioning of homes after the depression.

The Government has earned more than 55 million dollars in dividends on its money, at the same rate as paid to individual savers, LaRoque revealed.

As of July 31, all but 32 of the 1450 savings and loan institutions concerned had repaid the Government in full, in most cases ahead of due dates.

ADOPTS NEW CHARTER: Shareholders of the First Federal Savings & Loan Association of Washington yesterday approved adoption of the new streamlined Charter N, as prescribed by the Home Loan Bank Board. The modernized form contains about half the wordage of the old Charter K and simplifies operations "without granting any additional authority," according to an HLBB official. The new charter went into effect yesterday and the First Federal of Washington is believed to be the first in the country to adopt it.

ODD LOTS: The four-millionth motor vehicles to be built in this country this year is scheduled to roll from the assembly lines this week . . . American Locomotive Co. reported that its backlog of unfilled orders dropped 30 per cent, or 31 million dollars, in less than four months . . . Trans World Airline reported its passenger traffic in 20 Eastern cities in the first six months was 27 per cent more than in the same 1948 period . . . United Air Lines plans to buy five additional DC-6 planes from Douglas Aircraft Co. to cost about $4,300,000 . . . American Overseas Airlines will start service to Europe Wednesday with new double-deck stratocruisers from New York International Airport.

NESTEGG: Employes of the Washington Terminal Co. have purchased U. S. Savings Bonds having a maturity value of more than 3½ million dollars, it was reported yesterday by Auditor F. J. Bresnahan as the company started on its ninth year of operation of the payroll savings plan. During July payroll deductions for bonds amounted to more than $20,000 from earnings of 30 per cent of the workers, Bresnahan reported.

EARNINGS: Anaconda Copper Mining Co. reported net income of $18,005,738 or $2.08 a common share for the first six months this year, compared with $25,993,779 or $3 a share in the same 1949 period. Other earnings statements:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Grains closed mixed on the Board of Trade today when late rally recovered the ground lost during a forenoon sinking spell. Soybeans and lard, acting better than grains all day, ended with gains.

Fairly heavy selling swept the pits in the first hour. It was concentrated mainly in corn, but other grains also weakened. September corn sank to a new low since last February, when prices suffered severe shake out, and the May delivery reached a new seasonal low.

Wheat ended ⅝ lower to ⅞ higher, corn was ⅝ lower to ⅛ higher, oats were ¾ lower to 4¼ higher, rye was 1½-1¾ lower, soybeans were 1¼ to 2 cents higher and lard was 3 cents lower to 10 cents a hundred pounds higher.

4.5 Million Paid for Paper

ceedings brought by Mrs. Patterson's daughter, Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, who had sought to break the will of her mother.

Of this total, $50,000 was paid to Washington Attorney William E. Leahy alone.

The Washington law firm of Kirkland, Fleming, Green, Martin and Ellis received $100,000; while the New York firm of Jackson, Nash, Brophy, Barringer and Brooks got $60,000.

The accounting showed that the 7 newspaper executives to whom Mrs. Patterson willed the Times-Herald divided $511,252 in profits the paper earned from July 25, 1948 to May 31, 1949.

The reason the report stopped with May 31 in setting out profits distributed to the seven legatees was explained by the disclosure that the assets of the newspaper were transferred that day to a corporation set up just for that purpose, Times-Herald, Inc.

After that, profits of the newspaper were to go to its owners in the form of dividends on the corporation's stock, 70,000 shares of $10 par value each.

Funeral expenses for Mrs. Patterson, who died July 24, 1948, totaled $8839, the accounting showed, with $5969 going to Joseph Gawler's Sons, Inc., Washington undertakers.

The funeral orchestra received $135.

A Washington psychiatrist, Dr. Sigmond M. Lebensohn, received $450.

Elaborating on the sale of the Times-Herald, the account stated that on July 19, 1949, the executors of the estate and the seven legatees named in the will "accepted an offer from the Tribune Co., an Illinois corporation, to purchase for $4,500,000 in cash" either all the capital stock of the Times-Herald, Inc., or its assets, as the purchaser might elect.

McCormick elected to buy the assets of the newspaper, the accounting declared, and the deal was consummated yesterday with payment of the $4,500,000 cash, the document stated.

Sparks Fly in Senate Debate On Millions for Power Lines

Sparks flew in the Senate yesterday as it opened debate on a 590-million-dollar bill, part of which would finance building of Government-owned power lines in the Western areas of the country.

Opponents claimed the proposal was a step toward "nationalization of electricity" in the United States. But its backers said rejection of the plan would mean a reversal of the Nation's public power policy and give private utilities a "monopoly."

The argument stemmed from the action of the Senate Appropriations Committee in cutting the power line item out of the Interior Department's appropriation after the House had approved the funds. The money originally was earmarked for use in construction of transmission lines in certain sections of the West, Northwest and Southwest.

Senator Elmer Thomas (D., Okla.) opened the attack with a four-hour speech in which he urged his colleagues to back the Appropriations Committee and turn down the proposal.

Thomas said he favors "more public power," but he contended it would save money and bring lower rates if the Government contracted with private power companies to distribute the power to consumers. But Senators Hill (D., Ala.) and Murray (D., Mont.) declared this would short-circuit the public power program.

Hill maintained that the bill would "appropriate the people's power for the benefit of the private utilities."

"If the Government does not build transmission lines," Hill said, it would be forced to sell its power to "the one large private utility in the vicinity that can afford to build a line to the Government's dam."

Murray also charged that the bill would set up a private power monopoly.

But Thomas retorted:

"If it is a question of private monopoly or Government monopoly, I take my stand on the side of free enterprise."

Polio Increases Need for Nurses

In its second appeal in two weeks, the American Red Cross yesterday urged qualified nurses to register with their local Red Cross chapters for emergency polio duty.

Miss Ruth Freeman, national administrator of Red Cross nursing service, said there are requests for more than 100 nurses needed in various parts of the country.

Nurses accepting polio duty have their salaries, transportation and other expenses paid by the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Miss Freeman said.

D. C. Adds Six To Sales Tax Auditor Crew

The District sales tax division yesterday added six auditors who on Wednesday will join four now employed in canvassing the city's 18,000 businesses.

They will check observance sales tax regulations, and help merchants with bookkeeping problems, William Bogardus, chief auditor, said. Currently the new employes are studying the sales tax regulations.

Yesterday the four auditors already on the street began a door-to-door check of firms along Georgia ave.

Some 600 merchants have been visited by the checkers. Nearly all have certificates of registration, or say they have applied for them, Bogardus said.

Rookie's Climb Recalled

They Know Now Who A's Young Mr. Fox Is

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, AUG. 15 (NYHT).—Describing a ball game between the Yankees and Athletics, Mel Allen told of a headlong block that Johnny Lindell put on Nelson Fox, the Philadelphia second baseman, to break up a double play with the bases filled. The two New York runs which scored on the play were butted in, Mel observed, not batted in.

Well, mention of young Mr. Fox set a slow train of thought in motion. When you see the name of a rookie in a box score, especially if the young fellow is a total stranger whose arrival in the big league didn't get much attention from the press, do you ever wonder where ball players come from, how they get that way, what devious paths they have followed from school or the sandlots or the brambly bushes? A story goes with all of them, of course, and in each instance the story is at least a little unlike any other, although the broad outlines of all them are fairly similar.

Smith

When Jacob Nelson Fox came up with the Athletics this year, his name meant nothing outside the Interstate and Western League, where he had played. Nobody else knew him, or anything about him, except a handful of survivors of the Athletics spring training camp of 1944 in Frederick, Md.

ONE DAY a Ford truck with a Pennsylvania license rattled up to the ball park. In the cab were a middle-aged couple and a boy, Mr. and Mrs. Fox and their son Nelson. The kid was a chubby 16-year-old with a fat cigar sticking out of the middle of a round, baby face.

Seemed that pop had played sandlot ball as a kid and dreamed of making the majors but the business of earning a living had got in his way and he wound up as a farmer near St. Thomas, Pa., a village not very far north of Frederick.

When on Christmas Day, 1927, a son was born to Mrs. Fox, her husband resolved that the boy should have the opportunity he had missed. He went out and bought a ball and two gloves.

Nelson never had a brother and there weren't always neighbor kids to play ball with, but he never lacked opportunities for practice on that account. If no one else was available, Mrs. Fox would grab a mitt and play catch with him in the back yard. (The scene must have been like that pleasant bit of corn in "The Stratton Story," except that in the movie Jimmy Stewart pitches to a toothsome little Hollywood honeybun instead of his mother.)

So now Nelson was 16, still too young for the Army, and here was a big league ball club (the papers said) training within driving distance of St. Thomas, and there was the Ford truck with gas in the tank. Wonderful, Connie Mack said, let the boy register at the Francis Scott Key and he'd see to it that no harm came to him. The Nelsons said goodby to their boy and turned the truck north, beaming.

EVERYBODY IN CAMP went for the kid. He'd only played with high school and village teams but he wasn't bad. Not by comparison, anyway, in that frosty spring of 1944. He thought maybe he was a first baseman, and that's where he tried out. He was shorter than the average first baseman but he figured to grow. With his adolescent chubbiness, he looked too hefty for any other infield position.

On Sundays mom and pop would drive down in the truck. If the weather permitted an intrasquad game or a match with the Curtis Bay Coast Guard or the Martin Bombers of Baltimore. The couple would sit in the stands and Connie would get the kid into the lineup for a couple of innings. He was agile around first base. Now and then he'd get a hit.

He was a quiet kid who smoked a lot of big cigars. Fellows whose memory went back 20 years thought of his name and looked at his moon face and remembered the spring when another chunky, apple-cheeked farm kid named Fox first showed up with the A's. Later on that other kid had corrected the newspapermen's spelling, explaining that his name was Jimmy Foxx.

The A's signed Nelson Fox, farmed him out to Lancaster, Pa., for three seasons and then sent him to Lincoln, Nebr., where he batted .311 last year. As a part-time second baseman now, he is hitting .300 in the American League.

Before he was sent out in 1944 he made a Western trip with the Athletics. One small scene remains bright in memory. It was the dinner hour on the Hotel Chase roof in St. Louis. Lights were low and the band was playing. The kid had just polished off a sirloin. Now he lit a big cigar and tilted his chair back, settling down to watch the floor show.

He was alone and, naturally, didn't say anything. He didn't have to. This was the big league. Hot ziggety.

COLLEGE COACHES are disturbed no little over that 38-0 thumping the College All-Stars absorbed at the hands of the Philadelphia Eagles in Chicago the other night.

"Something must be done, and quickly, to give the college boys more of a chance or the game will kill itself off," some of our coaching friends, back from attending the game, were saying yesterday.

The way those pros (Eagles) pushed the college kids around made it no contest, and we all realize that it makes college ball look bad, coaches and players alike."

That's right, but what happened? It hasn't always been that way.

"No, it hasn't always been that way, but it will be like that more and more in the future, unless things are changed.

"The way things are now the college coaches are under too many disadvantages.

"The first thing is that they have about 68 college players on their hands. That's far too many for the short training period . . . many more than they can possibly use.

"A MORALE PROBLEM quickly develops. The coaches work with the college boys a week or so to get some line on their individual ability.

"About that time the coaches begin making up their minds that Johnny Jones is the best quarterback. Bill Smith, who had more publicity in college, doesn't like being shunted to a secondary role, so he's unhappy and the word gets around.

"With a squad of 68, a lot of boys get their feelings hurt.

"Then there's the coaching problem. The head coach uses one system, his assistants use other systems. Things don't jell. The college side would do a lot better if the man selected as head coach were free to bring his own staff with him."

But how about those Eagles? Wasn't it simply a case of their being too good?

'Sure, that's right, if you get right down to the bottom.

A's Explode Five Runs in 6th to Stop New York

Philadelphia, Aug. 15 (AP).—A five-run sixth-inning rally gained the Philadelphia Athletics a 9-5 victory tonight over New York's Yankees as Right-hander Carl Scheib picked up his fourth straight pitching decision. The defeat shaved New York's American League lead to three games over the second-place Boston Red Sox.

The victory gave the Athletics the last two of the five-game series with the league leaders. It came at the expense of relief pitcher Duane Pillette, who relieved Ed Lopat in the sixth with a one-run advantage.

Feller Beats Tigers in 10th On Peck's Hit

Cleveland, Aug. 15 (AP).—Pinch-hitter Hal Peck socked a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning tonight and handed Bob Feller a 4-3 victory over the Detroit Tigers. It was the Cleveland fireballer's sixth straight win.

Hurling against Hal Newhouser before 44,510, Feller entered the ninth inning with a 2-1 margin. But in that frame he walked Dick Wakefield and Vic Wertz put the Tigers in front with his thirteenth home run over the fence in right field.

Fight Speed With Speed

Fleet Backs Plentiful, So Skins Are Shifting to 5-4-2 Defense

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Occidental College, Calif., Aug. 15.—A switch from 5-3-3 to 5-4-2 doesn't excite most people. To most it doesn't make sense.

But to Head Coach Billick Whelchel and his staff, now making just that change in the Washington Redskins' scheme of things, its a cause for real pleasure.

On this switch, it is earnestly hoped, hinges a highly improved Redskin defense during the 1949 National Football League season. It's a concentration of strength where needed most, with players handling assignments they're more fitted to handle.

What do all the figures mean?

Well, last season, and for a few years past, the Redskins on defense presented a 5-3-3 pattern to the opposition. That number of defenders lined up in waves, five on the line of scrimmage with a center, guard and fullback in the second part and two halfbacks and a safety man in the third wave. Simple, Huh?

The opposition found it simple, at any rate. The center, guard and fullback backing up the line, obviously not the fastest men on the club, were trying to cover fleet halfbacks. All the Redskin defensive speed was provided by Dan Sandifer, Howard Hartley and Tommy Mont in the last defense, with rangy Hal Crisler in the safety position.

Now the Redskins have halfback speed to burn and have turned to the 5-4-2 system. It merely eliminates the guard in the secondary and puts a halfback on each flank. Two other halfbacks form the third line of defense.

All this was made possible by the addition of such speedy defensive backs as Bob Goode, Harry Dowda, Howie Livingston, Pete Stout and Mike Micka. Dick Pollion, the team's placement and punting expert, can also fit into the defensive picture.

The way Whelchel figures it, some of his halfbacks should be able to play all the defensive part of the game and half the offensive part. Fine runners like Sandifer, Goode, Dowda and Stout can expect to be used on offense as well as defense. That still leaves a number of excellent ball-carriers to concentrate on offense—Jack Kirby, Ed Quirk, Eddie Senaz, Steve Bagarus and Brian Bell.

Redskin coaches are proud of their new defensive set-up and happy about being able to install it.

Bell Pleasing To Everybody But Himself

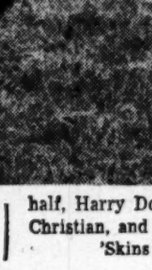
OCCIDENTAL COLLEGE, Calif., Aug. 15.—Like all rookies, Brian Bell spent the first week of the Washington Redskins' training season worrying. Mostly he was worried about his own speed.



Bell

Even after the Skins' first real scrimmage, the burly halfback from Western High and Washington & Lee University was not pleased with himself. All he'd done, among other things, was to intercept a pass and ramble 80 yards for a touchdown with it, later snagging a slant from Quarterback Bob Hainlen and sprinting 60 yards for a score.

"I'm a better football player than I showed out there," Bell said afterward. "I was 'way too slow."

The fact is that Bell is slower than many of the Redskins halfbacks, but he's as big as any. He packs 210 pounds on his rugged 6-foot-1 frame and handles his size very nicely. He has shown well on defense in most of the Skins' drills.

If the earnest son of the late Associated Press Bureau chief manages to land a Redskin job he will be the first Washington high school star to make the grade.

Bell may not be able to write his own ticket with the Redskins, but he could write his own success story if he sticks with the club. Majored in journalism at W&L and hopes to follow in his father's newspaper footsteps when he gives up football.

BILL BURNETT.

Palmer Wins 'World' Title By 2 Strokes

Chicago, Aug. 15 (AP).—Johnny Palmer, belting phenomenal recovery shots, plucked a four-under-par 68 to Jimmy Demaret's 70 today to bag the $10,000 top swag in a playoff for the Tam O'Shanter "World" golf championship.

Making each shot he took worth nearly $150, the 31-year-old Palmer really stole the vault keys on the seventeenth. His drive was in the heavy rough, with fir trees directly hiding a clean shot to the pin.

The Badin, N. C., pro picked an eight-iron, and although he was unable to take a free swing without ticking branches, he uncorked the top shot of the entire tourney. The ball lifted over the first row of firs and lit on the green 4 feet from the cup. He scored a birdie 4 to move two strokes ahead.

Demaret, treed on the other side of the fairway, had to play safe short of the green, eventually to take a standard 4.

They parred the first hole. Palmer's eagle 3 on the 495-yard second with a mere 6-foot putt shoved him ahead by one stroke. Demaret dropped a 7-footer for a deuce on the third to square the match, but took a 5 on the next when he missed a 5-foot putt.

After his eagle, Palmer shot eight straight pars to make the turn in 34. He failed on putts of 7 and 6 feet, which would have meant two birdies.

Demaret Bags Eagle

Demaret bagged an eagle three on the 475-yard tenth with an 8-foot putt to gain a stroke. Palmer birdie, although his drive caught a trap. He needed three shots to reach the green, but left himself only a 4-foot putt.

The chain-smoking Palmer went ahead by two when his rival needed four on the short eleventh after wandering into a bunker. Then he gained a three-stroke margin with a 4 footer for a birdie three on the twelfth. But Demaret took the thirteenth with par four as Palmer overshot the green for a five.

Demaret cut the edge to one stroke with a 4-foot birdie four putts on the 515-yard fifteenth. Palmer two-putted from 11 feet for five.

Palmer's tee shot on the 215-yard sixteenth rolled into the estimated 3000 customers following the match. Luckily the ball was stopped on the apron of the green. Both were down in 3, Demaret missing a 10-foot putt which would have paid him $140 from May's "Mutuel Window."

The critical seventeenth with Palmer's beautiful recovery for a birdie 3 really decided the issue.

Williams' Hit in 11th Drives Home Winning Run

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Boston, Aug. 15.—Ted Williams, a .350 batter, hit only .200 tonight but the one single he made in five tries was sufficient to bring the Boston Red Sox an 11-inning 3-2 victory over the Nats.

Williams' game-winning hit broke up a stirring pitching battle between Sid Hudson and Joe Dobson and enabled the Red Sox to sweep the six-game series.

Williams' lone contribution also moved the red-hot Sockers to within three games of the league leading Yankees who were beaten by the Athletics, for the second straight time this evening.

For big Hudson it was a cruel defeat. He yielded only seven hits, the same number the Nats got off Dobson, but while Dobson got airtight support, Hudson didn't and it cost him the game.

Dente's Error Costly

Had not Sam Dente made a wild throw in the fourth inning, Hudson would have scored a 1-0 shutout, as the unearned run was the only tally Boston owned until the Sockers rallied in the eleventh for two runs to wipe out a 2-1 Nats' lead and send 30,619 fans home late, but happy.

Hudson pitched beautifully. It was easily his best performance of the season, but all it earned him was his eleventh setback instead of his well-deserved seventh victory.

The long-legged righthander from Tennessee retired the side in order in seven of the 11 innings. Until the eleventh he had restricted Boston's power department of Dom DiMaggio, Vern Stephens and Ted Williams to only four hits between them.

Goodman Starts It

Pinch-hitter Billy Goodman started Hudson on his downfall by opening the eleventh with a double to left. It was Boston's first hit off Hudson in five innings and it soon became their first run in seven as DiMaggio followed with

Scribes Differ on Crediting Williams With Hit On Bobbles When Yanks Use Defensive Shift

BOSTON, AUG. 15 (AP).—The tremendous clouting of towering Ted Williams, the American League's leading swatsmith at the moment, apparently presents a problem for the scorer as well as the opposing teams' defenses.

How you look at it, well may depend on whether you are a Red Sox or Yankee fan.

The shifts the Yanks adopt against Williams—among other things—calls for Gerry Coleman, the second baseman, to move into short right field.

Three times this season at Fenway Park, Coleman has bobbled drives off Williams' bat. On all three occasions, the official scorer credited the lanky slugger with a hit.

Williams before tonight's game with Washington had 144 hits in 409 times at bat to lead the American League with a percentage of .352. If the three disputed hits were scored as errors, he would have 141 hits and a percentage of .345, and George Kell of Detroit would be in first place in the race for batting honors.

Two different scorers made the decisions. Here's their reasoning:

Coleman was playing out of his normal second base position—out on the right field grass. If the ball was mishandled on the infield turf it would have been called an error. On the other hand, if the right fielder had charged in and missed the ball Williams would have been given a hit.

Dan Daniel, New York sports scribe, takes a different view. He wrote it was "a serious question if they (the scorers) are justified in their insistence that grounders hit by Ted into that shift must be handled cleanly or be scored as hits."

Two of the scoring decisions occurred in June; one in the recent Red Sox-Yankee series.

Four experienced Boston sports writers—appointed by the American League president—handle the job of official scorer at Fenway Park. They split up the home season, three taking 18 games and the fourth man, 19.

One of the Boston writers, Jack Mullaney of the Post, says Williams suffers more than he benefits from the shift. He adds: "Coleman has thrown Ted out about 10 times this year from short rightfield."

A. L. Batting Averages, Minus Disputed Hits

Boston, Aug. 15 (AP).—Here is how the unofficial batting figures in the American League race would look if the three disputed plays at Boston were scored as errors instead of hits for Ted Williams:

Blue Fathers Happy When Blues Arrive

By Ralph Murdock

DR. EDWARD CRISP and ohnny Holland, co-owner of the aryland Super Market, have st returned from a two-day fishing trip at Wachapreague, Va., where they ttok their two sons for a taste of big-time angling.

Murdock

The first day out was devoted to marlin fishing. Seven hours passed nd not a single marlin could be nveigled. The anglers finally ave it up for a bad job and the coreboard registered four big t zeros for the quartet.

It was one of those embarrass-g predicaments where a couple f fathers ran fresh-out of ex-uses to their sons and were un-ble to explain why the fish box board ship was so conspicuous-y devoid of fish. Even the doc-r (Crisp) could not prescribe remedy to alleviate the sit-ation. So ended the first half f the trip.

After partaking of one of hose "famous Wachapreague" inners and an equally large reakfast, each angler was again n edge for the second half of he outing.

To make a long story short he anglers quit before the blues topped biting in order to get n some still fishing for flounder nd kingfish. (Also to rest up). A total of 125 fish, mostly blues, had filled the once empty fish ox which was the signal to call t a day and head for home. The "chesty" fathers needed no libis for the second and last day out. It was exactly what the doctor had ordered. The formula had really clicked.

SEVERAL MILES FURTHER up the Atlantic Coast at Chinco-eague, Va., another party of local anglers and a Texan were having a rough four-hour session with another school of bluefish. The blues got the worst of the slug-fest by losing 283 of their fight-ing "students." The blues were taken by trolling. Still fishing added 95 porgies and pompanos to their catch. A total of 378 fish was their first day's haul.

This same group of enthusi-astic anglers, which comprised Arthur G. Newmyer, James M. Newmyer, Julius Lully, proprie-tor of Harvey's Restaurant on Connecticut ave., and Thomas Fore of Happy, Texas, on the next day tried their skill at deep sea fishing. This trip produced 12 "nice sized" albacore and dol-phin. Captain Fred L. Savage was the pilot on both trips.

Here's a group of local ang-lers who selected Ocean City, Md. for their bluefish endeavors. They were Louis Luzi, Ralph Marcey, William Hasting, Dave Carter and Pinkney Summers and boated 150 blues while fishing on the "Ronnie' with Captain Bert Evan. The anglers went out 25 miles from the fa-mous resort "to get the blues."

HOW ABOUT MEETING Mr. P. H. Thomas? Now that he has been properly introduced we shall go into his fishing qual-ifications. He is what you might term an entire fishing party all bundled up into one angler. Single handed, he caught 81 dolphin and 4 tuna. The largest dolphin scaled 25 pounds and the school tuna averaged 4½ pounds each. He had three fish-ing lines out from the stern and modestly admitted that he never had a dull moment during the trip. The one man haul was made out of Nag's Head, N. C., with Capt. Omie Tillett as guide.

Our one-man crew is with the Securities Exchange Commis-sion and brought back several dolphin to his coworkers in Washington after the big scoop. He claims that the dolphin for food is a rare delicacy.

ANOTHER LETTER has been received from a reader relative to the finding of Jap beetles in the stomachs of fresh water fish. The missive comes from W. H. Wilson of Charles Town, W. Va., and outlines how John C. Skin-ner, prosecuting attorney for Jefferson County, while clean-ing some bass, found that they had been feeding on Japanese beetles. The bass were taken in the Potomac River near Har-per's Ferry.

Aviators Fail To Win Set At Brookline

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 15 (AP).—Capt. Robin Hippenstiel of Washington, D. C., and Lieut. Charlie Oliver of West Point, N. Y., Air Force doubles champions, were eliminated in the first round of the National Doubles Tennis Tournament here today.

Authur Larsen of San Francisco and Dick Savitt of Orange, N. J., ousted the fliers, 6—4, 6—2, 6—4. Harold Burrous of the University of Virginia and Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif., also succumbed in the first round of the men's division, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3, to Jim Brink of Seattle and Herb Behrens of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A Richmond, Va., pair, Robert G. Cabell, sr., and jr., passed the first round in the special father and son doubles team division by a default victory.

Wimbledon champions Richard (Pancho) Gonzales and the veteran Frankie Parker launched their bid by racing Blair Hawley of Boston, and Henri Salaun, Wesleyan College star, in 6—3, 6—0, 6—2 fashion. They gave the defending champions, Gardnar Mulloy and Billy Talbert, much to worry about as they sat out their first round bye.

Mrs. Patricia Canning Todd of Lajolla, Calif., and Gertrude (Georgeous Gussie) Moran of Los Angeles, rated just behind defend-ers Louise Brough and Mrs. Mar-garet Osborne Dupont, who are seeking their eighth straight vic-tories, moved into the second round by sweeping 12 games in a row from Louise Warfield of Baltimore, and Rachel Francke of Phila-delphia.

British Wightman Cup team-mates, Betty Hilton and Kay Tuckey ousted Virginia Boyer of Newton, Mass., and Lois Ladd of Winchester, Mass., 7—5, 6—1, and Mme. Magda Rurac, former Rumanian titlist, and Mrs. Baba Lewis of Boston, current Canadian champion, topped Mrs. William Herron and Dore Martin of Wor-cester, Mass., 6—0, 6—2.

Rain Delays Fight Card Until Tonight

Promoter Florence Turner yesterday caught some of rival Promoter Goldie Ahearn's weather (rain, brother) and was forced to postpone the Doug Ratford-Freddie Dawson fight show until tonight at Griffith Stadium.

The same card, headed by the 10-round No. 1 elimination bout for the lightweight championship, will go on tonight, the first fight starting at 8:45 p. m.

Surprising enough, Ratford came in heavier than expected at yesterday's weigh-in at the Boxing Commission, Ratford, who was down to 137 last Friday, tipped the scales at 140½ lbs., a half pound over the mark he hoped to make. He'll give away 2 pounds to Dawson, who hit 142½.

Tonight's supporting card will include the following bouts: Stonewall Jackson vs. Billy Patterson (8), Sonny Boy Mims vs. Holly Mims (5), Sammy Cochrane vs. Roy Hutchins (4), Marshall Clayton vs. Chink Williams (4), and Ralph Gonzales vs. Graham Jones (4).

The postponement of the fight also altered plans the Washington Homestead Grays had made for tonight. The Grays were booked for a double-header with the Philadelphia Stars and Indianapolis Clowns at the stadium.

Griffs Lose In 11th, 3-2

a double after Tommy O'Brien fouled out.

Al Zarilla, who scored the unearned run back in the fourth inning, was thrown out by Sherry Robertson for the second out as DiMaggio went to third.

Up strode Williams, hitless all night, and practically everyone in Fenway Park thought he would be passed intentionally. But the Nats elected to pitch to him and Williams, after fouling off the first pitch, slapped Hudson's second offering sharply into center field and the Nats' losing streak became six.

Ortiz Leads Off With Hit

The run that Dente threw in threatened to be the only tally that the Sox needed to win until the ninth, when Bob Ortiz singled, Buddy Lewis doubled and Jake Early flied out to score Ortiz and send the game into extra innings.

In the eleventh, however, it appeared that Hudson's great performance would be rewarded in victory. Clyde Vollmer singled and moved up as Lewis walked. Eddie Yost fouled out trying to bunt and Lewis helped the Red Sox cause along by getting himself picked off first.

Dente, however, atoned for his earlier error by singling to right to score Johnny Simmons, running for Vollmer, and the Nats asumed a lead they were to lose rather quickly in the bottom half of the same inning.

Zarilla Races Home

Boston's fourth inning run was set up by Zarilla's double and a single to deep short by Stephens. Dente, not content with conceding Stephens a base hit on a ball hit deep to the right of shortstop, tried to throw him out, but threw into the Boston dugout. Zarilla raced in with the only run the customers had for their money until the ninth.

Dobson was no fluke himself, but he didn't match Hudson. Williams and DiMaggio made two circus catches to save him trouble in the early innings and Merril Coombs speared a liner off Lewis' bat to help him later on.

For five innings, Dobson had allowed only one hit, a lead-off double by Ortiz which was wasted. The veteran right-hander weakened after that and was in frequent trouble, but the Nats couldn't pry a run out of him until the ninth. They had runner in scoring position in sixth, seventh and eighth—they had two on with only one out then—but nothing happened until the last ditch stand in the ninth.

James River Crew, Beaten Here, Will Play Host Sunday

By Happy Walker

THE HOSPITALITY flag hung high over the Potomac, Sunday afternoon, as some 30 visiting oarsmen from the Virginia Boat Club of Richmond, were guests of the Old Dominion Boat Club and Potomac Boat Club, in a matched 10 event shell race series.

Walker

At race time, however, friendships were temporarily sidetracked as Old Dominion and Potomac teamed up to take 8 of the 10 events from the James River crews. Potomac took the four-oared junior gig, junior eight oar, junior gig and the junior eight, while Old Dominion wrapped up the serior quad, junior doubles, junior quad and the senior eight. The Richmondites took the junior light singles and serior gig.

Among those giving their all for Old Dominion were, John Edmonds, Steve Davis, Sonne Weiners, Lou Bell and John Haines. The Potomac crowd starred Tom Patton, Steve Stevenson, Fred Maletz and Pete Sparhawk.

Next Sunday, the Virginians will attempt to turn the tables with a return match at their Mayo Island, James River Club.

ALL IS NOT a bed of roses in the life of a powerboat driver. Take the case of C. Wesley Lusby, Washington runabout hopeful, for instance. Sunday Wes trailed the Mrs. and his Miss Bell up to the West End Boat Club, Chester, Pa., to enter the family runabout class. Just before the one minute gun, the Chester River committee ruled Wes had to have a rider. No life jacket—no rider—no race. Lusby sat disgustingly by and watched as his competitors took the race. This was not the case with the seasoned Ike Hale, top-notch Washington outboarder. Fresh from his Saturday's success at Red Bank, Hale hit the Chester River starting line on the nose in both heats of the C hydros and came up with a first and second, plus the high point trophy for the outstanding outboarder for the day.

THE CONTROVERSIAL $475,500 appropriation recommended for D. C. by the District U. S. Engineer's office in the 1950 budget is still in doubt. The funds were requested to complete the partially built Pier No. 4 in the Washington Channel. The House cut the figure to $327,000, the Senate restored the original amount.

Hyattsville Row Holds Up Police Job

Hyattsville City Council last night failed to authorize appointment of an eighth policeman to the city force after a sizzling dispute over city vs. county police functions.

Acting Mayor H. W. Spicknall said the city was paying $21,000 for county police protection and therefore the city should not have to hire its own police force.

Councilman Frederick Coxen who urged approval for appointment of Silas Edward Dennis, jr., 28-year-old Marine veteran to the force, said the additional officer is needed so patrol cars can be manned by two men.

The appointment was advised by the council police committee and Dennis resigned his job as Maryland University policeman on the basis of an assurance he would be appointed, Coxen said.

After further debate as to whether the county should continue handling city police calls, only two councilmen voted for the appointment. Three others abstained from voting. Five affirmative votes are required to approve action.

One problem raised was whether the council at a previous meeting had in fact authorized the police chief to name an additional man to the force—and if so, was such delegation of authority legal. City Corporation Counsel Nicholas Orem, jr., begged time to consider the "touchy" question.

The council will reconsider the matter at its next meeting.

The council authorized the corporation counsel to attempt to negotiate a lease of property owned by Mrs. Rosemary Howard in the rear of the 5300 block of Baltimore blvd., near Church place, for a 59-car parking lot.

By The Associated Press

Vice President Barkley isn't taking any date to the Illinois State Fair at Springfield, where he's scheduled to speak Thursday afternoon.

Barkley, who has squired Mrs. Charlton S. Hadley, St. Louis widow, on several occasions recently, told reporters yesterday he doesn't plan to stop in St. Louis on the forthcoming trip.

The Vice President said that if Senator Lucas (D., Ill.) can get away, he and Lucas will make the trip together.

"I don't expect to stop in St. Louis either going or coming," Barkley said.

Pint-Sized Policeman's Judo Wins

The Fairfax (Va.) police force in the form of 140-pound Pvt. Roland (Peewee) Heath looked pretty puny last night to a hefty 56-year-old Fairfax electrician who, police said, had a few drinks too many.

When Heath, who often is declared the smallest man in Fairfax County, tried to arrest the electician for being drunk in public, near Camp Springs, Va., the man stepped back, police said, drew a small knife, and challenged: "Come and arrest me if you can!"

Some time later the county medical examiner treated the electrician, identified as William Douglas McFarland, for a scalp laceration, and "Peewee" booked him on charges of resisting arrest, attempted assault on an officer, and being drunk in public.

Heath, a judo expert from World War II, had seized the electrician by his right hand, flipped him over his shoulder to the ground and sat on him until help arrived.

McFarland was released in $1000 bail pending a hearing August 19.

20 Families Flee Homes In Harrisonburg Flood

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 15 (AP). Heavy rainfall early today sent Blacks Run out of its banks here and caused some 20 families to flee their homes on Liberty st.

By 8 a. m., however, the high water had receded approximately 1 foot.

Three blocks of Liberty st.—parallel to and one block west of Main st.—were under water estimated as deep as 3 or 4 feet. At some points the flood waters were reported covering an area 100 feet in width.

A heavy rainfall started about 3 a. m. and continued for several hours.

Families residing in the flooded section left their homes about daybreak. Several automobiles were washed down Liberty st. by the force of the flood waters.

Blacks Run last was flooded in 1940, but oldest residents said today's level was the highest they recalled. The stream, flowing southward through Harrisonburg, empties into the North River at Mount Crawford, 5 miles south of here.

Today's rainfall was described as purely local and there were no reports of high water elsewhere in the Harrisonburg area.

Race Issue Assailed as 'Political'

The racial situation "as it exists has no place in politics," Clifford H. Newell, former president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, told members of the North Englewood, Md., Citizens Association last night.

"The politicians are only confusing the issue and misleading the people of both races, getting nowhere toward a fair and permanent solution," Newell asserted.

Declaring that politicians are using the race issue "to advance themselves and control votes," Newell told his audience at Cheverly Christian Church, State st., Cheverly, Md., "if they will only leave us alone we can and will, in time, handle the matter."

Lauding the work of the newly organized bi-racial committee which is striving for a solution of racial problems, Newell, himself one of the founders of the committee, said the group is working in the spirt of good neighbors discussing their problems over a back fence.

Radio Liquor Ads Allowable, FCC Says

By the United Press

The Federal Communications Commission notified Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) yesterday that there was nothing in the law to prevent the advertising of liquor over the radio.

Johnson, who is chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, wrote the commission that radio advertising of beer and wine is "bad enough," but that the prospect of broadcasting hard liquor advertisement into the Nation's homes is "unthinkable."

by Jerry Kluttz

Proposed U. S. Pay Schedules in New Bills Compared

Here is a comparison of the proposed salary schedule for classified Federal workers contained in the Long and Murray pay and classification bills.

The Long bill would merge the 31 different CAF, P, and SP grades into a single general schedule of 15 grades, with a salary range from $2100 to $15,000. The Murray bill would merge present grades into a single schedule of 18 grades, with a salary range of $2186 to $15,000.

Because of these differences in the number of new grades to be created, and because the Long bill wipes out a number of existing grades, no attempt is made to show new grades or corresponding old grades in the table below.

To find what your salary would be under the new bill, look down the first column until you find your present salary; then follow the proposed rates across the Senate and House columns. If your present salary schedule overlaps with that of the next higher grade, use the first set of figures, showing your present salary. If you are now in a grade that overlaps with a lower grade, use the second set of figures showing your salary.

Petty Officer Drops to His Death From River Span

Cabby, Pedestrian Try to Stop Suicide; Victim Stationed Here Since Aug. 4

A Navy chief petty officer dropped from Memorial Bridge to his death in the Potomac yesterday despite efforts of a cabby and a pedestrian to thwart his suicide.

The victim was identified as Chief Printer William G. Midkiff, 39, stationed in Washington since August 4, and previously attached to Naval District staff headquarters at San Francisco. Police found no notes and could not obtain an explanation for Midkiff's act.

William J. Wally, 50, of 4802

The Washington Post
WILLIAM J. WALLY

River rd., Brookdale, Md., a Yellow Cab driver, said he picked Midkiff up at the District end of the bridge, near the Lincoln Memorial. Midkiff wanted to be driver across the bridge, Wally told Police.

Half way across, Wally said, Midkiff told him he had dropped a $5 bill out the window and asked him to stop. He did so. Wally then saw Midkiff had dropped a $1 bill over into the front seat. He then looked out and saw Midkiff had left the cab and was climbing the railing, Wally said.

The cab driver got out and pleaded with Midkiff but was told, "Don't touch me. Don't get close, because I'm going to end it all."

As Wally kept Midkiff's attention a pedestrian approached and tried to seize the Navy man, who was standing on the bridge edge outside the rail. Midkiff suddenly saw the pedestrian, and dropped into the river, Wally told officers.

Harbor Police recovered his body 10 minutes later. Artificial respiration was unavailing.

Dr. Christopher Murphy, deputy District coroner, issued a certificate of suicide by drowning.

Navy officials said a board of inquiry will be convened to investigate the case.

Columbia Park Area Seeking Floor Relief

Flood-plagued residents of the Columbia Park area have again called the District Board of Commissioners' attention to their plight.

Arthur R. Cochel, sr., president of the Columbia Park Community Club, yesterday in a letter on behalf of the organization to the Commissioners registered the latest of almost three decades of complaints.

However, Harold A. Kemp, director of the District Sanitation Department, to whom the letter was referred by the Board, held out little hope for immediate relief.

"Early in August," Cochel wrote, "the homes of residents . . . particularly those near Fifth and Ingraham sts., and Seventh and Hamilton sts. nw., were flooded following a heavy downpour. Some . . . to the depth of six or seven feet.

"Scores of basement apartments, recreation rooms, cellars and garages were inundated. The receding water left behind tons of disease-laden muck and slime. These floods have been called repeatedly to the attention of the District Commissioners. They have been occurring once, twice and sometimes three times each year since first a large number of homes were erected in the early 1920s.

"This club was informed last year, on the completion of the new sewers in this area, that these sewers would relieve the condition. Since then, however, we have had a number of floods, the one early in August being the worst in the memory of most of those living in the community."

Director Kemp said yesterday that his department was doing all it could with the money on hand.

"We have spent approximately $886,487 of a $3,400,000 flood-prevention program for the Columbia Park area," he said. "Floods won't cease until the program is completed. It took us three years to do what we've done. I don't see how we can do more than $500,000 worth of work a year to finish the plan."

3d Child in D. C. Family a Polio Victim On Eve of Grandparents' Anniversary

Robert Merritt, 7, At Hospital With Brother and Sister

By Tom Schlesinger
Post Reporter

Polio yesterday struck the same District family for the third time this month, claiming the third grandson of a retired Army major general on the eve of his fiftieth wedding anniversary.

Seven-year-old Robert Merritt, eldest son of Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Robert G. Merritt, 3305 Woodley rd. nw., yesterday joined his sister Carol, 5, and brother Keith, 4, at Children's Hospital as polio victims.

Keith, however, is expected to be released today, Commander Merritt said, in time to add a bit of happiness to observation of the wedding anniversary of his grandparents, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries. General Fries is retired chief of chemical warfare of the Allied Expeditionary Forces during World War. I.

The parents have recently searched high and low for causes for the strange attack, and have as yet arrived at no conclusion.

"The children have done just about the same things this summer as they have always done," Commander Merritt pointed out.

The health department reports only one other case within ten blocks of the Merritt home.

Since the first two children were stricken, the entire house has been scrubbed and much of it repainted. The parents themselves have offered themselves for tests to see if any source can be determined.

Keith's case was diagnosed the first of the month. Within a week Carol showed the symptoms and was taken to the hospital. Both children had mild muscular spasms, Keith in the ankles and Carol in the arms.

General Fries' Grandchildren

The Merritts have a fourth child, Pamela, 3.

Commander Merritt said he expected his daughter Carol home from the hospital later in the week. The Merritts live at the home of General Fries.

The wedding anniversary dinner tonight will consist of a quiet family gathering at the Army-Navy Club, General Fries said.

"We are all saddened at this occasion, but we believe that it is best to carry on as if nothing had happened."

He recalled that he and Mrs. Fries were married August 16, 1899, in Medford, Oreg., following a courtship that began before he entered West Point.

In addition to Mrs. Merritt, General Fries, 76, and his wife, 72, three other children will be present at the occasion. They are Barbara, wife of W. Theodore Pierson, Washington attorney; Elizabeth, wife of Shirley Hurst, Miami newspaperman; and Lieut. Col. Stuart Gilbert Fries, Fort Knox, Ky.

The general's wife is expected to use the same sword she used to cut her wedding cake in 1899 to cut a cake at tonight's anniversary.

The Merrill child was one of three reported diagnosed in the District, bringing the year's total to 28, compared with 31 a year ago.

Others listed today included a 14-year-old boy from the 5100 block of Cathedral nw., diagnosed at Georgetown Hospital, and an 8½-year-old boy from the 300 block of Hamilton st. nw., at Children's Hospital.

Student Hurt By Explosion Of Chemical

A 17-year-old Eastern High School student was injured severely yesterday when a quantity of an unidentified chemical exploded as he put a match to it in his back yard.

Keymenyas

The youth, Leonard Kemenyas, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Kemenyas, 514 9th st. se., was taken to Casualty Hospital with cuts over more than half his body. His condition was reported as only fair.

His mother said he was given a laboratory flask of a yellow She reported he poured the powder, touched a match to it, and the chemical exploded.

Casualty Hospital stated Kemenyas suffered multiple cuts about the head and chest, and down the left side of his body and leg. Some apparently were from glass. There were no burns.

Because of his condition, the youth could not be questioned immediately.

61 Neighbors Ask Voiding of Liquor License

Sixty-one persons yesterday petitioned District Court to declare void the issuance of a liquor license to Alex Browdy, 1918 Allison st. ne.

Named defendants in the complaint for mandatory injunction were Browdy and the members of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board here. The plaintiffs all live in the neighborhood of Browdy's business at the Allison st. address.

The suit, filed through Attorney Nathan M. Lubar, charges the ABC Board set one date for its hearing in the case and then heard it on another day. Also it is charged that the board disregarded the signature of certain persons on a petition protesting issuance of the Class A liquor license to Browdy.

Albert? Elbert? Confusion!

It wasn't their "p's" and "q's" that confused police in the District and two Maryland localities Sunday, but their "a's" and "e's."

The twisted tale, as unraveled yesterday, began when Albert Royster, 19, of Baltimore reportedly crashed an automobile into a light pole on 14th st. sw., near the Jefferson Memorial Sunday.

Telephone communications between police here and in Sparrows Point, Md., garbled Albert into Elbert, and police there said he was wanted on a shooting charge.

Elbert, police said, was wanted there on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon which arose from a shooting two weeks ago.

Taken to the Baltimore suburb in the afternoon by Sparrows Point Sergt. Raymond Vogel, Albert didn't match pictures of Elbert, the wanted man, who was (and is) Albert's 20-year-old brother.

However, Sergeant Vogel's trip was not all in vain. The crashed automobile turned out to be stolen from a Turner's Corner, Md., man before Albert began the journey interrupted here.

As result, Albert wound up in custody of Baltimore County police in Dundalk, charged with larceny of an automobile.

Home Rule Faces New Test Today

The House Judiciary Subcommittee today will make another attempt to reach a decision on the Washington home rule issue.

Last week the group, headed by Representative Harris (D., Ark.), voted 5-2 against pigeonholing the pending suffrage measure. Today's action may decide whether or not the legislation will be referred to the full District Committee for further consideration.

Jones Held In Neighbor's Fatal Beating

Charles Calvin Jones, 60, was held for grand jury action yesterday by a District coroner's jury in connection with the fatal beating Sunday of his 88-year-old neighbor.

Jones

Jones was accused of bludgeoning Joseph Blunt Quigley to death in the hallway of the apartment house at 942 I st. nw., where both men lived.

The accused man, who suffered the loss of an eye in an accident some years ago, which also left him with a stiff leg and crippled arm, did not testify in his own defense. He merely told Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy, who presided, that the testimony given by Detective Sergt. A. D. Clarke from a statement made by him was correct.

Witnesses, including neighbors and Mrs. Margaret Quigley, 1010 Massachusetts ave. nw., the dead man's daughter-in-law, testified that the two men had quarreled earlier in the day outside of the house.

Mrs. Quigley, who owns the apartment house, said she was summoned from her home at that time and quieted the men, urging her father-in-law to stay inside his room and not "have anything more to do" with Jones.

Police were summoned shortly before 1 p. m. by Mrs. Myrtle Potter, another apartment resident, after a second argument ended with Quigley lying at the foot of the first floor stairs in a pool of blood. Mrs. Potter said she didn't see the fight; she merely heard it from her apartment.

The second argument was occasioned by the front door of the building being locked. Mrs. Potter and a neighbor, Mrs. Jane Jacobs, 940 I st. nw., said. Jones accused Quigley in a profane manner of locking him out, they said.

Sergeant Clarke said Jones had been drinking to the extent that he could not question him immediately, but declared the accused man was not drunk at the time.

Arlington Man Held in Death Of Pedestrian

A District coroner's jury yesterday held an Arlington man for action of Municipal Court under the negligent homicide act as the result of the death Sunday of a pedestrian struck by his automobile.

Lemons

The man, Francis T. Lemons, 23, of 4317 S. 9th st., Arlington, was identified by Pvt. Thomas B. Shipman of the Accident Investigation Unit as the driver of the car which fatally injured William Cox, 73, of 1821 Le Droit ct. nw., about 1:10 a. m. Sunday at 13th and W sts. nw.

Cox died at 6:05 a. m. the same day in Freedmen's Hospital. Cause of death was listed as shock resulting from loss of blood from compound fractures of both legs, Dr. Anna L. Smith, of the hospital staff, testified.

Witnesses said Cox was struck while standing in the center of 13th st. in the north crosswalk, apparently waiting for traffic to pass before continuing across the street. Lemons' vehicle was straddling the white center line of the street just before it struck the man, they said.

Lemons, a drug clerk for Peoples Drug Stores in Alexandria, testified he did not see Cox until he was within 3 feet of the man. Blinding lights of approaching vehicles interfered with his vision, he said. He placed the speed of his car at "not more than 25 miles an hour." This was corroborated by other witnesses.

Charities Get Funds From Inauguration

Refusal of Senate To Remove Tax From Tickets Cuts Total by $63,000

The committee in charge of President Truman's inauguration last January made a final profit for charity of approximately $53,000, the White House announced yesterday.

This profit was after a Federal amusement tax "bite" of about $63,000, the announcement said. Had the Senate gone along with an Administration request to exempt tickets for the various inaugural events from the tax, a total of $111,738 would be distributed to charity, through the Community Chest.

President Truman wrote a letter to Melvin D. Hildreth, Washington attorney and chairman of the inaugural committee, congratulating him on the committee's success. The letter included such facts:

1. The committee handled a total of $710,000, more money than any previous inaugural committee.

2. Guarantee fund subscriptions, $258,405, were also the largest in history, and were returned completely to guarantors.

3. The firm of public accountants which supervised the committee's financial affairs, complimented it highly on its operations and found them "accounted for fully and completely." The CPA firm was Milton E. Maybruck and Co.

4. A plaintive phrase in the White House announcement, "If the committee obtains return of the tax," indicated the Administration has not yet given up hope.

The House of Representatives, in the pre-inauguration week, hurriedly passed a bill granting tax exemption on the tickets. They had been sold tax-free in anticipation the action would become law.

But the day before President Truman took his oath, a half dozen Democrats in the Senate banded with Republicans to block passage of the bill.

Judge Keech To Play Role Of Solomon

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

A habeas corpus writ was issued yesterday so a District Court judge may decide who is the mother of a 3-year-old Washington boy.

Judge Richmond B. Keech signed the writ which requires that the boy, Jonathon Miller, also known as Jonathon Little, be brought before the court on Monday.

The action was filed by Mrs. Mary Miller, 6123 Parkwood rd., Landover, Md., through attorney John T. Bonner.

The suit charges that Jonathon is being held illegally by Mrs. Geraldine Little at 1317 10th st. nw.

Separated From Husband

Mrs. Miller said that in July, 1946, she was separated from her husband, destitute, and went to live with Mrs. Little. It was during this period, Mrs. Miller said, that she was pregnant with Jonathon.

Charging fraud, Mrs. Miller said that when she went to Gallinger Hospital a month later to bear the child, her name was given as Geraldine Little. The child was listed at the hospital by Mrs. Little as her own son, and so it has remained on the records, the suit says.

Mrs. Little has refused to hand over Jonathon, and only recently did Mrs. Miller learn that she had a court remedy, according to the action.

Mrs. Little, who is 42 years old, recently was the central figure in a decision of the United States Court of Appeals, stating that she was within her rights in refusing a health inspector without a warrant access to her home for an inspection.

Baby Boy Died In Fire

This month, her 18-month-old baby boy, Benjamin, died in a fire that broke out at her residence.

She also has a son Gregory, 3½. She is the wife of Floyd Little, a Capital Transit streetcar operator.

Mrs. Little could not be reached for comment but her attorney, Jeff Busby, issued the following statement:

"Mrs. Miller signed a formal release which I drew up stating that she did not want the child. Mrs. Little has cared for the child Jonathon since he was a week old. Now that the child is older and a nice little tot, Mrs. Miller wants him back."

School Budget Of $213,740 in Falls Church

The Falls Church city council last night unanimously approved a $213,740.66 school budget for the coming year—an amount to be raised by a school tax rate of $2.65 for each $100 assessed valuation.

The rate is the same as last year, only this time taxpayers will pay it to the second-class city of Falls Church rather than to Fairfax County.

The $2.65 school tax rate is in addition to a property tax rate of $1.90 for each $100 previously approved by the council.

In another action, the council authorized an investigation of (1) the cost of building its own sewage disposal plant, and (2) of pumping its sewage into Arlington County lines for disposal. Fairfax County now cares for the majority of the city's sewage disposal.

The new school budget breaks down to a total of $156,588.16 for school operating costs and capital outlay, and $57,152.50 as a contingent fund which school officials expect to carry over for unexpected expenses arising in the 1950-51 school year.

Total capital outlay in the budget is $19,736.45, which among other things includes the cost of equipping four additional school rooms for the Madison-Jefferson School—the only school the city of Fall Church itself has at the present.

A reference to this was made by Dr. Joseph Seay, acting school board president, to last night's open meeting which was attended by 40 persons. Fairfax Circuit Court recently upheld Fairfax County in its refusal to give up Falls Church High School and Oak Street Elementary School, which Falls Church had tried to get after it became a second-class city.

Costs of sending Falls Church students to the high school and the Oak Street school were included in the budget. The cost of sending county students to Madison-Jefferson School will be received next year from the county, it was said, and the two sums are expected to cancel each other out.

Taxes the forthcoming year are expected to bring about $159,000 into the school-budget coffers, with an additional $29,000 grant expected from the State. An additional sum of $25,000 has been authorized to be borrowed to set up accounts.

The council's move to investigate alternatives for sewage disposal was prompted by a proposed three-million-dollar sewer bond issue in Fairfax County's Sanitary District No. 1.

The issue will be voted upon August 30.

Councilman J. H. McCarthy, chairman of the utilities committee, told the council that Fairfax has threatened to up the rates it charges the city for sewage disposal, making them about $36 a year for the householder for each connection.

Florida Men File Answer On District Transit Deal

Question Power Of ICC to Stop Purchase, Assail U. S. Arguments

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

Attorneys for a Florida group which is seeking to acquire stock control of the Capital Transit Co. yesterday filed exceptions to an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner's recommendation that the purchase be disapproved.

In a 7-page brief, John J. Manning and John R. Turney, attorneys for Louis Wolfson and eight other Florida businessmen:

1. Questioned the ICC's jurisdiction.

2. Challenged the examiner's statement that the applicants lack interest and experience to assure adequate service.

3. Pointed out that under an act of Congress, nine of the 15 directors of Capital Transit must always be bona fide residents of the District.

Latest "Hectic Effort"

Filing of the brief with the ICC is the latest development in hectic efforts of the North American Co., a holding firm, to dispose of 109,458 shares or 46 per cent of the outstanding stock of Capital Transit.

The Florida group had contracted to purchase the block of stock at $20 a share. Last Thursday, ICC Examiner Vernon V. Baker held that the proposed transaction would not be in the public interest.

In their exceptions, the Wolfson attorneys stated: "The commission's jurisdiction of this proceeding hangs upon the sheerest threads of technicality. It arises only by reason . . . of the corporate fiction that the Capital (Transit) and Montgomery (Bus Lines, a wholly owned subsidiary) are separate organisms . . ."

Experience Angle Hit

The brief contended that "in fact the two companies have been one for 20 years or more."

"It is a new look in administrative law," the brief went on, "that a citizen cannot invest, at least to the point of control, in the securities of a local bus company without first becoming experienced in transportation. Had that been a necessary qualification, there would be few . . . investors in the stock of transportation companies . . ."

Continuing, the brief stated that the would-be purchasers "have proved themselves to be successful and prudent businessmen and in every way fit to control the Capital Transit Co."

As such, the petition asserted, "they realize their investment in Capital Transit will be neither a good nor safe investment unless the management is good and the public is given efficient and adequate service . . . The finding, therefore, that the applicants would lack interest to assure adequate service is baseless, false and misleading."

Residential Qualification Debated

The brief also argued that "nowhere in the Motor Carrier Act is there any provision which vests in the commission the discretion to establish the physical, moral, financial, business, social, religious . . . or residential qualifications of a . . . stockholder of a carrier."

Further, the brief contended "the finding that the non-residence of applicants would prevent intelligent or sympathetic consideration of the service needs of the street car riders is equally uncandid."

"Again the report ignores the testimony that under an Act of Congress, 60 per cent of the Capital Transit's directors must be bona-fide residents of the District, and hence fully cognizant of the needs of the District and wholly sympathetic therewith."

GWU Student to Spend Week on Marquee

By John London
Post Reporter

The fat and the scrawny as well as the muscle-bundle types were represented yesterday in the collection of 150 young Washington men who volunteered to live for a week in shorts atop the Keith Theater marquee, starting Wednesday.

Of course it's a publicity stunt, for a movie called "The Blue Lagoon," a J. Arthur Rank production about a young couple shipwrecked on a South Pacific island.

As might be expected, many of the volunteers were high school and college student extroverts. A few others said they were unemployed. One lad bitterly explained he was "bored with civilization."

"Life in the city is just too confining," John Flynn, 24, 702 Butternut st. nw., declared. "I sell vacuum cleaners and I'm fed up with selling vacuum cleaners.

"Yeah, I move around but only from door to door. Maybe if I get this job the publicity will lead me to some career where it's not all routine, maybe even in the jungles somewhere."

This the slight young man said backstage just before one of the publicity men shouted instructions for the motley crew to take off shirts and undershirts.

At that moment a girthsome, apple-cheeked lad sheepishly wandered off. He identified himself as John M. Foley, 21, 322 6th st. se., and shyly confessed: "I guess I don't like my competition. I guess maybe I'm not the right build."

A few others slithered away. Some of those remaining laughed nervously, and seemed to be wondering how they ever happened to get there.

But not Aubrey Mayhew, 23, 739 H st. se., who sought out a reporter to volunteer the information that "I'm an entertainment promoter, see. This publicity is what I need, bread and butter, see."

As the reporter ugh-ughed, the muscular Mayhew expanded his chest to 42 inches and continued: "Tell 'em I promote hill-billy music, tell 'em I was for some time the human cannonball with the Zacchini Brothers, tell . . ."

Then there was the dapper Princeton man on vacation, Tony Sylvester, 21, of Gaithersburg, Md., who explained his presence with a statement that sounded out of character; "I can use a few fast bucks."

Nearby were a professional boxer, his big arms tattooed from wrist to shoulder; a gangling farmer's son from Iowa, visiting his wife's folks here; and a frail teenager who said he hoped, maybe, by some strange twist of fate he might be selected and then "they'd be surprised around my block."

Ten finalists were selected for their "durability and masculine beauty." From these the publicity people finally, after mature deliberation, selected the lucky Maroon Man—Clarence Elliott Kuldell, 25-year-old engineering senior at George Washington University.

Clarence is known to his friends as Curley, although his blond hair is too closelp cropped at the moment to curl. A basketball, baseball and football man, he's about 5 feet 11 inches tall, solidly built and eager to pick up a little change before he goes back to school. He lives at 3615 Davis st. nw.

Clarence will be served the best food from restaurants; water, straight—and frequent visits from Washington lovelies. He'll receive $75 for the week.

Harry J. Lane, 22, student in Indiana, 5011 7th st. nw.; William Stephenson, unemployed apprentice carpenter, 3518 26th st. ne.; Nick de Lodovico, 19, Miami University student, 241 Longfellow st. nw.; Jim Lanza, 20, University Maryland dental student, 1770 Kilbourne pl. nw.; Frank Metzler, 21, masseur, 1929 K st. nw.; Bill Rickert, 25, Iowa State student, 1650 Harvard st. nw.; Jack Maddox, 29, dramatic school student, 1611 R st. se.; Ken Calfee, 27, University of Maryland drama major, Riverdale, Md., and Wyatt Heard, 19, Baylor University student, 3353 Martha Custis drive, Alexandria.

Judge Urges Civic Action On Drunks

The chronic drunkard is a problem for the community as well as for its courts, Judge Frank H. Myers of Municipal Court declared yesterday.

He reported a summary of two months of dealing with drunkards, and urged that efforts be made to interest "public-spirited citizens in bringing about a better understanding and handling of the problem."

Myers, new to the court where these cases were tried, instituted a system whereby all accused of intoxication were given one chance at freedom before being sentenced to jail. He said that for his purposes it did not matter how often a defendant had appeared before other judges.

The results he summarized as follows:

Persons charged with intoxication totaled 3936 between June 6 and August 5, making an average per court day of 74. Second offenders during the same period were 485 and third offenders 10. Defendants requiring hospitalization numbered 72.

"If this method of imposing sentence by giving every person sentenced one opportunity to do something for himself resulted in the prevention of only a few repeaters, it was worth while," Myers wrote.

The repeaters, he said, "in the majority of cases reached a point, as shown by their continuous return to the court for the same offense, where they were no longer able to control their own actions, and accordingly should be treated as patients, rather than as criminals."

Judge Myers commended the Probation Office and the volunteers of Alcoholics Anonymous for their rehabilitation efforts.

Trial on charges of desertion of a sailor who claims he was shanghaied into the French Foreign Legion was continued indefinitely yesterday.

A new date for the general court-martial of S/1c James Patrick Ryan, 24, of Hawthorne, N. J., had not been set by last night.

Ryan was declared an unathorized absentee from the destroyer Harlan R. Dickson on July 4, 1947. The ship was then at San Remo, Italy.

He claims he was drugged, suspected by the French of being an American spy, and was pressed into service of the Foreign Legion after being tortured. He said he escaped early this year after seeing service in Africa and Indo-China.

Pet Cemetery Next to Arlington . . .

The Washington Post

65 DOGS BURIED HERE—This cemetery for pets lies about 100 yards from the rear wall of Arlington National Cemetery. The oldest legible date on any marker is for October, 1925. Many of the stones and boards have flowers or weathered flags planted alongside them

'Saving Wife' Tale Costs Man $25 Fine

The hero's tale that Paul Hockman, 19, of 124 C st. ne., told police —about how he saved his wife from a rapist—backfired yesterday when he was fined $25 for telling the phony story.

Judge Frank H. Myers of Municipal Court imposed the fine on Hockman and released the defendant's wife, Phyllis, 18, on her personal bond not to repeat the offense.

"This is a serious offense and you are getting off fairly easy. I hope this will be a lesson to you not to repeat the offense," commented the jurist.

Hockman had told police he saved his wife from the attack in an isolated section of Fort Dupont Park. However, police said they ascertained that Hockman had used his wife as a lure to get a victim, a Chicago engineer, into the park. There, police said, Hockman attempted to rob the engineer who managed to escape.

Hockman was not immediately released after his court appearance. Police said he is wanted as a parole violator from the National Training School.

A charge against Hockman of assault with intent to commit robbery was dropped. Assistant United States Attorney J. Warren Wilson said that the complainant failed to appear in court.

Fort Myer Pets Get Own Graveyard

Within a stone's throw of Arlington Cemetery and less than half a mile from the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier is another burial ground, virtually unknown except to a small segment of the military personnel at Fort Myer.

It is the Fort Myer Pet Cemetery, where are buried nearly 100 assorted pets whose military owners loved them enough to perpetuate their memory by providing them a last resting place, equipped with appropriate markers.

The white-fenced plot, situated between the Military District of Washnigton Motor Pool and Arlington Cemetery at the south end of Fort Myer, is marked by neat rows of white grave markers which tell the identity of the dead animals.

No Rank Preference

Pets of military personnel ranging from privates to generals are buried there, and rank obviously has been given no preference in the choice of burial sites.

Although most of the pets were dogs, there are graves of other types, including a monkey, an alligator and a rooster. The latter was the constant companion of Col. Martin Du Fresne, who raised it from a chick.

In charge of the burial ground is Corpl. James Rusk, who is now on his second "tour of duty" as custodian. He was reassigned to the job about 18 months ago, after post officials learned he had served in the same capacity when assigned to Fort Myer from 1935 to 1941.

Most burial "services," Rusk recalls, have been quiet, "family affairs." But on at least one occasion, the small graveyard was the scene of a full military burial.

Mascot's Funeral

Late in the 1930's, according to the corporal, every member of Troop F of the Third Cavalry turned out for the funeral of "Piker," an English bulldog which had been the mascot of the unit for six years. A formal parade, with pallbearers carrying a flag-draped casket, was climaxed with the sounding of "taps" and the firing of a memorial volley over the dog's grave, Rusk recalled.

Some of the graves are soon forgotten, but not all, says Rusk. One Army officer comes to the little cemetery about every two weeks to place flowers on the grave of an English setter buried about three years ago.

The cemetery is supposedly reserved for pets of Fort Myer personnel, but some exceptions have been made. Funeral services were held recently for the terrier pet of a Navy captain, who heard of the burial ground and managed to get special permission to bury his pet there as a matter of "military courtesy."

Mrs. Welles Rites Today In Maryland

Mrs. Welles was the former Mathilde Townsend, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Townsend of Washington. She and Mr. Welles were married in 1925.

After Five Years' Analysis, Woman Wonders If Conflict Between Meekness and Hostility In Her Nature Will Ever Be Happily Resolved

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman of 33, considered by intimates to have exceptional measure of personal assets without ever having made use of them.

For five years I have been seeing an analyst who has helped me in every respect but one; and that is my inability to assert my own wishes and integrity; and my difficulty in saying "no."

Although I am well poised and even at times self-confident, I frequently am powerless to hold my own ground. I smile sweetly at effrontery, not recognizing it until it has passed, unaware for the moment that locked behind my "gentle" exterior is the raging fury of a balked lioness.

Can Meekness Be Congenital Flaw?

ANALYSIS has disclosed the causes of this paralysis of will, and my doctor assures me that it will be cured. But after years of treatment I wonder if she says this merely to boost my confidence? I am the kind of person who needs to know what she is up against; and doctors can be mistaken in shielding patients from the truth.

If meekness is an inherent constitutional factor, I want to know it and face it, and accordingly avoid as much as possible those persons who are apt to impose upon my passivity—which fortunately is confined largely to my personal life. I assert myself fairly well in business.

Please tell me, do you know of any clinical evidence to show that the meek—who seem to reap nothing but suffering and humiliation—can belatedly assert the quality of self-preservation, which presumably is part of the natural inheritance of all human beings

A. Z.

Real Meekness Signifies Power

DEAR A. Z.: Speaking of "the meek," there are two types of meakness, one genuine, the other counterfeit. Real meekness issues from healthy, mature, highly rational character and is indicative of powerful personality, for it expresses the power of self-control. And he who controls himself is mightier than he who rules a kingdom, Scripture tell us.

True meekness enables its possessor to deal patiently and thoughtfully—also fearlessly—with provocation dealt by ignorant, rude or belligerent people, and to stand up for the right in doing so, without seeking a quarrel.

Counterfeit meekness, on the other hand, issues from an anxiety neurosis and expresses fear. It amounts to behaving with stricken apology for one's very existence, in certain company or certain relationships,—as if one felt "exposed," in these instances, as being too worthless, too sinful (almost) for human tolerance. It is a mannerism which aims at "erasing" oneself at such times, lest one be destroyed by critical attack, or by pitiless pressure-demands that one couldn't oblige, yet wouldn't dare dispute.

She Is Neurotic From Habit Now

SUCH behavior isn't inborn. Rather it is a conditioned reflex (or habit) of panic that has gripped the personality. It goes back to childhood fear of wrath, rejection or punishment for displeasing "authority,"—i. e., God, parents, teachers, maybe elder brothers and sisters, etc.,—which carries blindly into adult years, too, unless the victim gets wise to the infantile formation of his distress and clears it out of his system by daily practice of logically self-respecting attitudes in his personal relations.

As I understand, the newer school of analysts is helping persons like you to arrive at normalcy, by hospitably encouraging honest self-expression in the therapeutic relationship, and by reacting as an interested friend—not a deadpan recording machine that offers no specific pointers on "what to do,"—and by plugging for immediate solutions of immediate difficulties. All this is known as "emotionally corrective" retraining, which gives the patient actual experience in cooperative fellowship, such as he (or she) hasn't had before.

After five years' analysis, you ought to be nearer a "cure" than you seem to be; and maybe the trouble is that you tend to substitute talk for action. Discussing your problems is doubtless less taxing, at any given moment, than really using yourself in a systematic effort to "work" your way out of them; but action, based on understanding, is the only antidote to what ails you. So stop crawfishing and face the people you fear—and I promise they'll change in proportion as you do.

M. H.

Gala Fetes Celebrate Independence of India, Pakistan and Korea

By Elizabeth Maguire

FROM SIX to midnight yesterday society was on the go. The Capital was caught in a whirl of parties, caused by the simultaneous celebration of Independence by Korea, Pakistan and India. It was the first year of independence for Korea, and the second for Pakistan and India.

Traffic was heavy around Sheridan Circle from 6 to 8, as colorful receptions were held at the Korean and Pakistan Embassies. Hundreds of diplomats and officials and their wives met each other going back and forth between the two parties.

Later in the evening, at 9:30 o'clock, Mme. Pandit received her guests at the Indian Embassy. The beautiful Ambassador wore a silver grey sari pinned with white orchids. She was assisted in the receiving line by the Minister, B. R. Sen, and Mme. Sen.

The hilly approach to the embassy was like fairyland with trees and lawn lighted up. Inside the door a rich incense burned, and the walls were lined with ferns and white Easter lilies. The drawing room was filled with a colorful mixture of costumes—smart military uniforms, white dinner jackets, evening frocks and heavenly saris in shades of soft blue, flame red, pale gold, strawberry pink and the deeper colors of wine red and midnight blue. At one time the pastel shades were considered smart, but in the last year the Indian women have gone back to the old-fashioned rich shades.

Red and white chairs were placed outdoors on the flagstone terrace, and here was the popular gathering spot of the evening. The Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, was there with his Naval Attache, Rear Admiral Eugeni Georgievich Glinkov, and Mme. Glinkov.

In the immediate offing was the Portuguese Ambassador, Theotonio Pereira, talking with the Ambassador of South Africa and Mrs. Andrews, the Ambassador of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Thomen and the Chinese Ambassador and Mme. Koo. The Danish Ambassador, Henrik de Kauffmann, Vincent Sheean, and Mr. and Mrs. George McGhee were also on the terrace.

Most delectable spot of the evening was the dining room where an L-shaped buffet offered a variety of buffet dishes. There was salmon en gelee, chicken in aspic, native Indian dishes, iced silver bowls filled with cut up fruit, and strawberry ice cream and coffee eclairs.

Masses of white flowers were placed around the pine-paneled dining room, and in the drawing room were a mixture of red and white glads. In the receiving room photographs of the late Mahatma Gandhi and Prime Minister Nehru were placed in prominent spots.

Among the many guests were Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. A. C. Wedemeyer, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. H. H. Vaughan, Undersecretary of State and Mrs James Edwin Webb, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina, the Ambassador of France, Henri Bonnet; Maj. Gen. and Mrs. J. A. Gascoigne, Gen. and Mrs. John Chapman, the Minister of Ireland, Sean Nunan; Ambassador-at-Large Philip Jessup, Philip Jessup, jr., Mrs. Marquis Childs and her daughter, Melissa.

First Party for Korean Envoy

FOR THE first time, the Ambassador of Korea, John M. Chang, was host at a large official party here. Mme Chang who flew to Washington just a week ago, was unable to attend, and one of her daughters, Miss Benedicta Chang, received in her place, standing next to her father. The Counselor, Sae Sun Kim, and diminutive Mme. Kim also received.

The Korean Embassy, located on Sheridan Circle, is one of the prettiest in town. The entrance is a mosaic in rose—the Oriental rug is rose, the draperies are rose and so are the chairs. Upstairs the drawing room is done in soft green with mirrors edged in thin gold.

A semicircle of plate glass in the dining room looks over a garden blooming with crepe myrtle and a fountain framed in white pine and azalea. The garden was not used yesterday, but its beauty was not lost on the hundreds of guests who attended the party.

Senator John Foster Dulles of New York and Mrs. Dulles were in the gathering, as well as Gen. and Mrs. Claire Chennault and the Ambassador of Portugal, tall, distinguished Pedro Theotonio Pereira. The Charge d'Affaires of Sweden, Ingemar Hagglof, and Mme. Hagglof and Senator Theodore Francis Green were also there.

Among many other guests were Col. and Mrs. Randolph Coyle, Phillips Clarke, Neal Stanford, John Staggers, Mr. and Mrs. David Fernsler, Samuel Ericsson and Miss Emily Ericsson. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Keith, popular Washingtonians now living in New York, drew a circle of friends.

Guests Crowd Pakistan Garden

AROUND the circle and across the street to the Embassy of Pakistan we went next and so did most other guests. Here the garden was used, rain or shine. A huge marquee striped in orange and green protected the wide lawn, and buffet tables and bars edged the flower beds.

The Ambassador and Mme. Ispahani received indoors standing at the head of the square staircase. Mme. Ispahani was gowned in gold tissue, and her jewels were diamonds and emeralds. So many guests attended the reception a turn around the garden took at least a half hour.

Rosy pink salmon and fat turkeys, countless bits en gelee, wonderful salads, and mousse parfaits, disappeared in one course. Cocktails and cool drinks were passed on silver trays, and everyone stayed on and on, happy to be in a crowd on a cool day.

A popular couple in the gathering were the Ambassador of South Africa and Mrs. Andrews, who have just returned from Cape Cod and are about to leave for Paris.

Capt. Simon Bland, aide to Gen. Sir William Morgan, was saying his farewells to everyone he saw, as he is about to leave for England where he will vacation for two weeks and then go on to Malay to take a preliminary course in jungle warfare before joining his regiment at Kuala Lampur. Mr. and Mrs. Mohsin Taliv of Singapore attended with Mohamed Abdel Aziz Zayed, Egyptian Commercial Counselor. The latter has just returned from a four-month vacation in Egypt and insists it's hotter there than here. Nobody believes him.

A respectful distance was held by all around the huge cake which centered one of the buffets. A single piece the size of a telephone directory was cut and ready, but up to 8 o'clock, no one seemed brave enough to help himself. The cake was white iced with the green and white flag of Pakistan.

In a small group were the Ambassador of Denmark, Henrik de Kauffmann, the Ambassador of India, Mme. Pandit, and Senator Greene. Others at the party included the Ambassador of Ceylon, G. C. S. Corea, the Ambassador of Nicaragua, Guillermo Sevilla-Sacasa, the Minister of Hashemite Jordan and Mme. Haikal, and the Minister of Finland, Dr. K. T. Jutila.

About Having Baby Shower Out of Town

A very good friend of mine who lives in another city is expecting her first child about the end of this month. I shall be visiting my husband's family in that city soon. Therefore, I should appreciate your help with the following questions: Would it be appropriate for me to give a baby shower at the home of the new mother if she is not allowed out so soon? If the baby has already received many gifts, is there some type of shower that would avoid duplication? Would it be appropriate, for example, for the invited friends to buy one large baby gift? Would a new mother's shower instead of a baby shower be appropriate if the baby has already been heavily "gifted"? Your advice about these matters and also some suggestions as to how to initiate shower plans will be appreciated. A. C. B.

It would seem that the confusion—even though happy confusion—attendant to arranging and having a shower in the new mother's home would be too strenuous for her unless she had lots of help. At the time of your visit she will have been home from the hospital only a few days—not long enough to be on her feet much less have her housekeeping with a new baby running smoothly. So, as I say, unless she has efficient household help, I'd suggest you limit your shower to a late afternoon call, possibly with three or four other intimate friends and thus present your gifts.

If, on the other hand, the new mother has her household so well managed by someone else that she is playing a complete lady of leisure roll, a shower might be a welcomed diversion. If she's a person who enjoys surprises, that might be a nice way to do it. But, even though it is a surprise to the honor guest, someone in the household should be "in on it" to the extent of helping to set the most appropriate day and hour for the party.

After the time of the party has been set, then you will proceed just as you would for any party, invite your guests, decide on refreshments and so forth. The refreshments should be simple and of the sort which can be easily moved since I presume you will wish to bring them with you.

As for gifts, I think your idea of a New Mother's shower is excellent. A first baby does receive so many gifts that it would be hard to give something not already received. For the mother you could have a lingerie, handkerchief or apron shower.

I have several boxes of good used clothing that I would like to deliver to some agency in Washington for overseas relief. I do not find any such listed in the telephone directory. Could you help me to help others? A. C.

Would you like to aid the earthquake sufferers in Ecuador? Clothing of all kinds is needed there, including coats and other warm garments. They can be delivered at the Ecuadorean Embassy, 2125 Leroy pl. nw., here, for shipment to Ecuador. If you cannot deliver the clothes, telephone Dupont 4661 and they will be called for.

To "Worried Mother:" To keep children from opening the rear door, weld a rigid piece of steel to the edge of the front door in such a way that it will project over the edge of rear door when both are closed. (Both should close toward center for this to be really effective.) Close rear door before closing the front door. The steel piece will make it impossible to open rear door unless the front door is opened. R. C. N.

In your column recently, a lady asked about how to prevent children from opening rear car doors. There is an attachment on the market that fastens to the front door. When the front door is closed, the rear door cannot be opened for the metal extension passes over the rear door. This will work on most cars, those that have front and rear door latches on the center post. In the meantime the lady might tie the back door window frame to the center post. G. E. R.

Many thanks to G. E. R., R. C. N., B. D. S., and others who have written in with suggestions for "Worried Mother." Their letters, (which include names of places selling safety locks or doing special work to make it impossible for youngsters to open rear doors of cars) are being forwarded to "Worried Mother."

Simply Answer Sex Questions—Don't Lecture

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Parents have moved slightly backward in the matter of sex education. In the many, many years when all discussion of sex was taboo, children got their information hit or miss. In rebellion against this "tell nothing" program the parent-educators of 30 or more years ago espoused the exact opposite, a program of "tell all." This was intended to right the evils of the first.

It has become apparent, after 30 years of trial, that the child subjected to a deluge of indigestible information poured over him at his first, innocent question, can be as confused as the child who was told nothing or had to pick up his information from companions as ill-educated as himself.

Child Was Not Ready

The parent discovered that she could not fulfill her obligation to her child to make sex relationship clear, by saturating him with facts he was unready to absorb.

So the step backward to a middle pathway which is a natural reaction to both of these extremes. Now, the parent answers honestly and conscientiously only the questions the child asks when he asks them.

She does make it possible for him to ask questions by keeping herself free from all prejudice about the discussion of sex. She realizes, now as then, that parents are in the ideal position to interpret sex for a child in a wholesome, practical, and beautiful way. It is the child who is forbidden to talk about sex or whose questions are evaded who feels a salacious interest in this repudiated subject.

There are the same advantages to answering sex questions honestly as to answering inquiries about any subject under heaven. The child senses that his earnest questions are respected. He develops faith in the parent who answers honestly and not facetiously or evasively. He respects his parents' knowledge and wisdom. He gets right instead of faulty and garbled information.

Family, Child Drawn Together

And, best of all, parents and child are drawn together in sweet intimacy when the child discovers that between himself and his parents no subject is too silly or too embarrassing for discussion.

Mothers and fathers who follow such a course find that their frankness develops neither excessive curiosity nor a desire for personal experimentation. Children are satisfied. They build their knowledge bit by bit, in the normal way, and eventually come to a wholesome understanding of sex relationships.

G-Girls Learn Art of Grooming

With a few accessory tricks and the right make-up, any girl can be well groomed.

So approximately 400 Government girls learned in the initial program presented by the Virginia Farrel Organization of Detroit at the Department of Agriculture Auditorium last night.

Attending the F-B-I (Fashion-Beauty-Improvement) of job grooming session, the G-girls were shown inexpensive wardrobes enhanced with multiple accessories, the do's and don'ts of job etiquette and the art of underplaying make-up.

While the Washington women in the audience were told how to improve themselves, one Government girl was being "made over." Miss Drexel Bullivant, chosen from the group by audience applause, remained backstage during the two-hour program and emerged in the finale in true Cinderella fashion.

In the meantime, the girls in the audience applauded their approval of velvet ribbons worn around the neck, monochromatic schemes in fall costumes and a bit of feminine pink net and a rose worn at the throat of a suit for evening wear.

This, the first feature of the F-B-I of Job Grooming, will be repeated tonight at 6:30 p. m. in the Department of Agriculture auditorium. The second session, the grooming clinic, will take place on Wednesday and Thursday night at 5:30 and 7:30 p. m. During the clinic each girl will receive individual help in applying make-up, and be taught modern trends in easily cared for hair styles as well as training in figure control and correct posture.

The Family Scrapbook

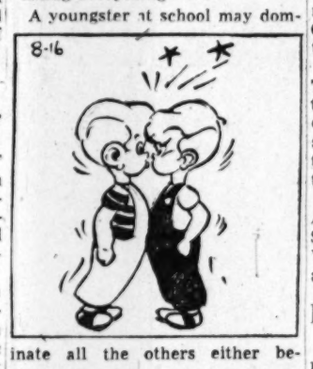
Most of us don't enjoy seeing children fuss and quarrel among themselves. The "reasonable" and "cooperative" child gets our vote of approval. Unless we are careful, we may find ourselves feeling good about the youngsters who, in order to keep things running smoothly, really lets others run over him.

Some parents advise their youngsters to "hit back" on each and every occasion in which there may be the slightest provocation. We needn't accept this in order to avoid the opposite extreme of "taking everything

A youngster at school may dominate all the others either because of superior arm muscles or similarly strong tongue muscles. Teachers and parents alike should give moral encouragement to those dominated to stand up for themselves, to refuse to accept orders without question, to make some decisions for themselves and not always depend on a little dictator.



Learning to stand up for themselves brings children real self-respect. I still remember the time when our twins, who when young were rather shy, delightedly told how they had said, "So what?" when the current classroom "boss" threatened not to let them play unless they followed her wishes. This first resistance to junior-style dictatorships was a red-letter day for them.

Summer Salads

THE NEXT best thing to dining out on these hot nights is to eat a cool salad at home. And if the salad can be made in the morning before heat exhaustion takes over, it's just about perfect.

From the Fishery Council comes this recipe for Seafood Horseradish Salad which can be made in the a. m. and eaten in the p. m.

SEAFOOD HORSERADISH SALAD

2 tablespoons gelatin
¼ cup cold water
½ cup horseradish
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash of tabasco
1¾ cups tomato juice
⅛ teaspoon pepper
½ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped green pepper
2 cups flaked fish or crab meat
Crisp lettuce

Add gelatin to cold water. Bring tomato juice to boiling, add gelatin and dissolve. Add remaining ingredients except lettuce. Pour into 8-inch ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold and garnish with lettuce. Yield: 6 servings.

Luncheon or supper salads which may be prepared well in advance of serving time are a boon to the hostess. Today's recipe for molded pinea; le and cucumber salad chablis is an old favorite of this type with new, sparkling flavor.

MOLDED PINEAPPLE AND CUCUMBER SALAD CHABLIS
(Serves 6)

2 envelopes plain, unflavored gelatin
½ cup cold water
1 (9 oz.) can crushed pineapple
1½ cups chablis or other white table wine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 green pepper, minced
1 cup finely diced cucumber

Soften gelatin in cold water for 5 minutes. Drain pineapple and to the juice add the wine, lemon juice and enough water to make 2 cups liquid. Bring this liquid to a boil; add soaked gelatin, sugar and salt; stir until gelatin and sugar are dissolved; chill until slightly thickened. Fold in drained pineapple, green pepper and cucumber; pour into a ring mold or individual molds; chill until firm. Unmold on crisp salad greens and serve with mayonnaise.

Headboard Beds Can Be Used in One-Room Home

You can have headboard beds in a one-room apartment by dividing your room, according to Paul MacAlister, nationally known authority on interior decorating.

It requires careful planning in a small space, but Mr. MacAlister has worked out an ingenious arrangement which makes two well balanced rooms out of one. He suggests inserting a low storage wall at right angles to the room wall to form a partition between the sleeping and living areas of the room.

To further separate the two sections of the room a row of plants could be placed on top of the storage wall, or a simple latticed framework can be easily built with vines trained over it. Such room dividers frequently have been made decorative assets which give no hint of their utilitarian purpose, but would seem to be designed for effect alone.

The storage wall, then, serves as a background for the beds and headboard, and will provide an effective contrast to the headboard upholstery. The bedspreads, a slipper chair and the end wall can be done in color contrast to the living area to set it off as a "second room."

One on the Aisle—

Another Drive-In To Open Monday

By Richard L. Coe

A FOURTH DRIVE-IN auto theater will be added to this area next Monday. It's on the Leesburg Pike, Route 7, near Baileys Cross Roads, Va.

This will be called the Sunset Drive-In. President Henry Wilson says that this newest of outdoor movie screens will be the best money can buy. He states that 500 cars will be able to face the 52-foot screen and that if you're intent on leaving the car for his refreshment center, you'll still be able to hear what's going on on the screen.

Just what feature pictures Wilson has up his sleeve hasn't been announced, but he's settled on his price scale: One buck plus tax admits your car no matter how many adults or kids are in it.

This second entertainment venture at Baileys Cross Roads (don't forget the Cross Roaders' red barn), is part of the national increase in buggy screens. There are more of them every year and this summer's brought some 48 that I have statistics about.

According to the boys who run 'em, drive-ins have had a strong effect on the movie-going public, attracting not only people who otherwise couldn't park the youngsters, but also reviving old pictures that teen-agers haven't seen. The fascination of being able to sit in your old clothes, with the 4-year-old gurgling at the screen between snatches at the popcorn box, and the 6-month-old dozing in the back seat has lured those who have no baby-sitter.

And speaking of babies: a few months ago a child was born in a drive-in one night while mom and dad were watchin' the pitchas.

So now E. M. Loew's Open-Air on the Richmond Highway, Sidney Lust's Beltsville Drive-In and Paul Foley's Airport Drive-In are about to have a little brother.

MAX E. YOUNGSTEIN, head of Paramount's publicity set-up will be in town today to address the Advertising Club of Washington at a luncheon at the Statler . . . Local theater folk will gather to hear him elaborate on his favorite theme: "What's RIGHT With the Motion Picture Industry."

THOSE TANNED musicians around town are just recuperating from their fourth annual outing at Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach . . . Not only did the boys play oall, there were three bands on tap so everyone could have a shot at the dance floor.

WARNER BROTHERS come up with an interesting plot, further indicating the realization that there's gold in the studio vaults just sittin' around . . . They plan to rerelease a series of clippings from Dick Powell's musical movies. Dick's been in so many private-eye roles lately, the younger set may not know that back in the dark '30's Powell was a popular crooner.

"GOING NATIVE" is whipping into shape, but takes off for a four-hour picnic this morning on a cruise down the Potomac . . . The all-native revue opens a week from Thursday on the Capitol stage, with "The Secret Garden," starring Margaret O'Brien, as the picture.

THIS is your last day to see the Little's W. C. Fields' festival, "The Bank Dick" and "My Little Chickadee" . . . Two musicals take over the summer revival series tomorrow, "La Traviata" and "Die Fledermaus."

THE OLNEY Theater would like it known that it's going to designate 8:30 as curtain time; too many people have been reading 8:45 and arriving at 9 o'clock . . . Sooo, see you tonight at Olney at 8:30 for Dean Harens' bow as a star in "Charm."

Show Time

Policeman Kills Another

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 15 (AP).—A Clarksburg policeman shot and killed another early today and Chief E. G. Amsler said it was the result of a prank.

Patrolman Chester Shack was shot in the heart.

Patrolman Robert Lee Fawley, 35, is held in jail on an open charge.

Chief Amsler said this is what happened:

Shack and Fawley patrolled adjoining beats, meeting at the street corner at intervals.

As Fawley rounded the corner this morning, Shack tossed a blackjack at him, thinking to scare him.

Fawley, who could not see his fellow policeman in the early morning dark, whipped out his revolver and fired.

Shack staggered into Fawley's arms.

Fawley called headquarters for an emergency car, which rushed Shack to a hospital. He died on the operating table.

The Harrison County coroner said there will be an inquest.

Gallant Male Rhea Hatches Eggs for 4 Wives

Detroit, Aug. 15 (AP).—Mr. Rhea, a male bird who lives at the Detroit Zoo, is a badly henpecked husband these days.

He's getting thin and haggard. Zoo Curator Arthur Greenhall reported today, because four Mrs. Rheas are making him hatch all their eggs.

Already the overworked father has hatched out 40 little Rheas, but still the nest is so full that he has to spread his wings to cover it and can hardly leave in search of food. And when he does, one of his wives is sure to deposit another egg there.

Mr. Rhea, who looks like an ostrich and has South American ancestors, got himself stuck with his unnatural duties, Greenhall said.

Woman's Slaying Trial Postponed In Kentucky

Pikeville, Ky., Aug. 15 (AP).—Blaine Edgar Jones pleaded innocent today to charges of murder, rape and robbery in the slaying of a 10-year-old Pike County woman and Circuit Judge E. D. Stephenson postponed his trial until next Monday.

Judge Stephenson ordered the postponement to give defense attorneys, appointed today, time to prepare their case and to draw a panel of 150 prospective jurors from neighboring Knott County.

Jones, 32-year-old Richlands, Va., Navy veteran, was said by police to have signed a statement last July admitting he killed and robbed Mrs. Lois Collins in March. He has denied the charge of rape.

Arlington School Board Member Would Run Again

Dr. Curtis E. Tuthill, a member of the Arlington County School Board whose term expires this year, said yesterday he would accept nomination as a candidate for reelection this November.

In a letter to M. Riggs McCormick, chairman of the Arlington Conference on School Board Candidates, Dr. Tuthill said he would be "greatly honored" at having his name placed in nomination by that organization.

The conference, composed of Arlington County Parent-Teachers Associations, the Citizens Committee for School Improvement and other county civic organizations, will select its candidates September 6 and 7.

O. Glenn Stahl, second school board member whose term expires this year, has announced he will not seek reelection.

Ocean Dive Halted At 2300 Feet as Lights, Fan Fail

Santa Cruz Island, Calif., Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Submarine Explorer Otis Barton dropped 2300 feet into the Pacific in a hollow steel ball today, but was forced to postpone his attempt to break the world diving record.

Original plans to dive to 6000 feet—twice as far down as man has ever gone—were tossed aside after the powerful lights on the outside of Barton's diving ball went out.

"It would be a farce to go down without lights," the scientist announced over the telephone to the surface.

The failure of lights was caused by a faulty power cable.

Barton said an electric fan failed at the same time the lights went out. He was forced to keep the air circulating with a hand fan.

When he reached the surface, Barton squeezed out through the tiny round hatch to declare he would make another attempt Tuesday, provided repairs can be completed in time.

Meridian Hill Acts Coward's Gay Triangle

For the third time this summer, theatergoers are being offered tart observations by the Bard of Picadilly. Last night Noel Coward's "Design for Living" opened a week's run on the Meridian Hill Park stage, felicitously played, happily heard.

Vicki Cummings, the baritone blonde, stars as the lady who can't be bothered to stick to either of her two crisp-spoken males, Director Alexander Kirkland and Derrick Lynn-Thomas.

The pleasures of hearing Coward's devious badinage remain considerable and accent once more the inability of other playwrights to make three acts of amusing words. Strive as they may, they rarely achieve Coward's slick way with life's minutiae.

When Miss Cummings' Gilda speaks of glands and their effects, it is neatly: "If you knew what was going on inside you, you'd be bitterly offended." Let the heroine make a kindly remark about someone and she becomes "a lady jaguar defending her young." What-might-happen-if is put as "an unpremeditated roll in the hay."

Neat Triangle Twist

Quite as much as this skill in twisting a notion is Coward's originality in dealing with a plot that in other hands would be cliche. The skeletons of his plot are nattily disguised. This is just one more triangle story—two men and a girl—but by suggesting that marriage has nothing to do with their relationship, Coward achieves the effect that he's being naughty.

He isn't, of course. A policeman might find shocking things in the Meridian Hill play this week, but should he, they would be in his mind and not evident on the stage. For Coward's sophistry speaks in varied voices to varied minds in inverse ratio. The more observant one has been of life, the more of a reporter Coward is, the less a man to shock you.

Able Acting Trio

"Design for Living" bears the inevitable stamp of Coward's success; his lines and insults have been copied by others and by himself. But it holds up finely as a comedy of modern manners (except for a remark about the late, lamented Olympic) and the cast is adept.

Miss Cummings looks fine, sounds properly blase as the lady. Alexander Kirkland, the Meridian Hill's director making his bow on its stage, does an assured job as Otto. Derrick Lynn-Thomas completes the triangle admirably, a young player with a fine voice. The diction of all three is particularly good, a necessity at any time, a vital must for Coward.

Coward conversation's the thing at Meridian Hill this week and when it comes to bright talk you can't top Destiny's one time Tot.

R. L. C.

Hollywood, Aug. 15 (AP).—Ethel Barrymore, queen of America's royal family of the theater, was given a heart-warming tribute today on her seventieth birthday.

Fifty-five of those years have been spent on the stage and before movie cameras.

President Truman joined the thousands who congratulated the silver-haired Ethel. Telegrams poured in by the thousands to her seaside home in the Palos Verde Hills.

At a studio luncheon given by Louis B. Mayer, Billie Burke told 50 guests: "We are paying homage to the most beautiful woman and the finest actress of our day. You don't just love and admire Ethel Barrymore; you worship her."

Miss Barrymore said: "I don't feel 70. I feel very, very young. I have lots more to do in my life and I hope that in the twilight of my life I can go on doing it to the best of my ability."

Tonight, Miss Barrymore assembled with a small group of friends at the home of Director George Cukor to hear the Nation-wide radio broadcast in tribute to her.

Bing Crosby was chosen to open the program by singing "Happy Birthday," followed by the President's tribute and Miss Barrymore's reply. There also were greetings from Herbert Hoover, New York Producer Arthur Hopkins, Bernard Baruch, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Herbert Bayard Swope, W. Somerset Maugham, Spencer Tracy, Walter Huston, Charles Laughton and many others.

An especially warm greeting was extended to Ethel from one of her old beaux, none other than Winston Churchill.

Space Lent To School By Church

A step to relieve overcrowded conditions in the Hume Elementary School was disclosed yesterday by William A. Early, Arlington School Superintendant.

Early said permission has been granted to use two Sunday School rooms in the Calvary Methodist Church as an annex to the adjacent Nellie Custis school.

About 60 children who would have attended the Hume School will be transferred to Custis for the coming year. The two schools are about a mile apart.

The church has agreed informally to give the Custis School use of the Sunday School rooms free in return for their maintenence, Early stated.

The county will install modern lighting in the church rooms.

A new school building for Hume pupils, scheduled for completion in February, 1950, will not be ready before September, 1950, Early said. Negotiations for a proposed eight-acre site for the new school on South 24th st. between Ode and Nash sts. still are in progress.

To Judge Collie Show

W. R. Van Dyck, president of the Collie Club of America, will judge the Collie Club of Maryland Sanction Match, starting at 1 p. m. Sunday. The show will be held at Sylvan Dell Swimming Pool, Old Court rd., on Rt. 125, at Granite, Md. George J. Noppenberger of Ellicott City is chairmand of the show committee.

Development of a new technique in electron microscope photography which may offer a "powerful means" for broadening present knowledge in fields ranging from television to atomic physics was announced yesterday by the National Bureau of Standards.

Using the technique, known as the "electron-optical shadow method," it now becomes possible to photograph and study the minute "atomic magnets" within magnetic materials—"magnets so small that the use of a probe any larger than an electron would obscure the effects they produce."

Described as "a valuable tool for fundamental research in physics," the development is the result of a series of electron-microscope experiments conducted by Dr. L. L. Marton of the bureau's electron physics laboratory.

"The new technique," said the bureau, "should offer a powerful means for broadening present knowledge regarding the basic magnetic properties of metals; learning more about certain types of ultrahigh frequency equipment used in radio, radar and television; and improving the design of electron-beam apparatus used in atomic physics."

WANT-AD WONDERS

Because it was midwinter, a New York laboratory feared it would have to delay a scientific test for lack of the flies needed for it. A Want Ad quickly solved the problem, however. A boy reader brought in six dozen flies.

To fill his needs the average American or Canadian uses $2 worth of Want Ads a year.

POST ADS WORK WONDERS, TOO!

DENTAL ASSISTANT—Experience not necessary. Phone NA. xxxx, between 2 and 4 p.m.

"10 calls every 15 minutes!" exclaimed Dr. A. F. "They didn't even wait until 2 p. m. as specified in the ad." Needless to say, Dr. A. F. found a dental assistant the first day his ad appeared.

NEW YORK.—In "Jolson Sings Again," the film-story has Jolson returning to Broadway after the separation from his wife, and then quitting his show when the news of the divorce makes him ill-tempered and moody . . . The fact is that Jolson loves Miami and its race tracks. When he made his Broadway comeback in "Hold On to Your Hats," he told Ben Bernie: "Of course I won't go South this winter. After so many years away from New York, I'm in a hit show and I'll just skip Florida this year" . . . Bernie bet him $250 that when the first vacationer returns from Florida with a tan darker than Jolson's, the star would leave the show and go to Florida . . . And that February Jolson suddenly decided he was "ill," paid the Bernie bet and went to Miami.

Gertrude Lawrence removes her nail polish during heatwaves. "When it's this hot," she explains, "anything you can possibly shed helps" . . . Collier Young, now producing films with his wife, Ida Lupino, is familiar with the needs of actors. When he represented RKO, the most tantalizing offer he made young hopefuls was: "We'll give you $35 a week and all you can eat for five years" . . . The record shop near the Rivoli Theater has a sign proclaiming "So habla Be-Bop" . . . Ben Marden, former proprietor of the Riviera, is in Europe now on investment business. He's buying, among other things, the dog-track on the outskirts of Paris.

When Marc Blitzstein's opera version of "The Little Foxes," starring Jane Pickens, opens on Broadway, Billy Rose will be among the first-nighters. Rose first became interested in the composer when he saw "Cradle Will Rock." Then Blitzstein wrote "No For An Answer," and tried to get Rose to finance its production. He played and sang the roles in the drawing-room of Rose's Beekman Place home, which is adorned with a Rembrandt, a Hals, a Raphael and a Utrillo. The producer listened to the leftist opera and its shrieks about the rich exploiters, and said: "Mare, Nat only will I not produce it, but I'm thinking seriously of calling the police."

Vera Zorina played a benefit show in Hollywood. And when she was about to walk on stage she sighed: "You wouldn't believe it—but for the first time in my life, I wish I were Milton Berle" . . . Newbold Morris has spoken at hundreds of dinners where Lucy Monroe sang the "Star-Spangled Banner." Mr. Morris, the Fusion candidate for mayor, finally told Miss Monroe: "We seem to be in a rut, you and I. Tonight, how about YOU making a speech, and I'll sing the 'Star-Spangled Banner.'"

Printers Get Cost Warning

Oakland, Calif., Aug. 15 (AP).—An employer spokesman warned the International Typographical Union today any demands that will increase costs will be resisted firmly.

Speaking at the opening session of the ITU annual convention, Thomas P. Henry, jr., of Detroit, said:

"You are going to meet resistance this year to any demand that will increase costs.

"And there is going to be a good economic report for the firm stand that employers will take. We suggest that you analyze this situation yourselves and that you temper your demands out of an appreciation of the situation which our industry faces."

Henry is president of the union employers section of the Printing Industry of America, Inc.

"I venture to say that no cost increases which occur at this time can be passed on at all," he continued. "If an attempt is made to pass them on, sales will be lost. Some companies will not be able to cut prices and the less efficient ones, as always, will have to cut back their operations sharply."

The ITU, Henry said, could perform a valuable function by urging its members to increase their productivity on present equipment.

"It is no secret," he said, "that the industry and its customers are seriously investigating new methods of composition."

D. C. Readies 1858 Pumping Engine For Smithsonian

A relic of the District's water system, a pumping engine built in 1858, is being rehabilitated for presentation to the Smithsonian Institution.

David V. Auld, superintendent of the water system, said yesterday it would be about six weeks before the old engine will be ready for presentation.

The old engine was originally installed in the west abutment of the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge over Rock Creek and forced water into the high ground of Georgetown. It remained in use until the 1870s.

MAKE A SIMPLE UNDERSHOT WATER WHEEL

Water wheels have been used for centuries to do much of man's work, and today the same idea is used at our great dams in the form of water turbines. At these huge hydroelectric power plants they are used to convert the energy of water into electric energy.

We can have fun making simple little undershot water wheels out of shingles or orange crate wood. An undershot wheel is one where the water goes under the wheel.

Cut two wooden strips about 9 inches long and 1½ inches wide. Notch them at the center so that they fit together as shown. Wire the pieces together and allow the wire to extend on both sides for an axle. Cut two forked sticks and drive them into the banks of a narrow creek or stream, so that the water wheel axles can rotate in the forks. Allow the paddle tips to barely touch the water, and you are ready to generate losts of fun.

LAWYER'S TESTIMONY

Q. When Black died, his administrator was sued for collection of a claim against Black's estate. The claim was based on a note of which Black was allegedly a co-signer. The administrator denied that the signature was Black's, and the claimant called Black's former lawyer as a witness to identify the signature. The administrator objects, claiming that any familarity the lawyer may have with Black's signature was gained in the lawyer-client relationship and is not admissible testimony. Correct?

A. The rule that lawyers may not testify as to communications from clients (unless the client consents) grew out of the need to have people be able safely to tell their lawyers everything needed by the lawyers to act in their behalf. This privilege does not extend to facts learned by the attorney which were not told him by the client, even though the lawyer learned them while serving as attorney. Thus, learning familiarity with a client's signature is not a communication. Therefore the attorney is permitted to testify that it is indeed Black's signature on the note.

BARNABY

Mrs. Van Ess is leaving tomorrow and we're going to keep her company this last night—It's just across the way—We'll look in on you every now and then. You won't mind?...
No. My Fairy Godfather will be here later—
Yes... In your dreams.
Chees, Boss, I could take one dame while you lift the pails—But now comes company...
Yeah. Bad—
Mr. O'Malley! Did you call the FBI—And the Marines?
No. Didn't have a nickel. I sent McSnoyd with a note.
But we have a more pressing problem—Gus collapsed. While standing guard.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Looks Like Coffee Just Wasn't Strong Enough

Walford E. Snyder of 4202 Russell ave., Mount Rainier, Md., says that I missed part of the story when I told about Joe "Awful" Coffee's restaurant in Denver.

District Liner Snyder recalls that he once asked Joe whether they called him "Awful" because the restaurant's coffee was so bad. The reply was:

"Naw — I picked up that name when I was a prize fighter."

HIS LUCKY DAY

Kids these days don't miss much—but sometimes they don't quite understand everything they hear.

When 5-year-old Francis Winston of 1823 Ontario pl. nw. went to the hospital for an operation, he was tense and apprehensive.

His apprehension was undiminished even during his hospital convalescence, and it wasn't until he was safely home again that he relaxed and sighed:

"I sure am glad I got out of that hospital without them palming off a baby on me."

STREET SCENE

Our reporter for this one is Mrs. E. W. Sell of 6906 23d ave., Hyattsville, Md.:

Two amputees from Walter Reed sat in their wheel chairs at Fern st. and Georgia ave., waiting for a break in the traffic, so they could cross the street.

But it was 4:30 p. m., and the stream of cars seemed endless. Every time the wheel chairs edged out a few inches, they were forced to retreat again.

But one of the cars that drove past was a scout car from No. 6, which immediately pulled over to the curb.

Raising his hand and stepping out into the middle of the street, the policeman from the scout car stopped traffic—then waved the amputees across the street.

He was Private Lee McInteer, and his buddy at the wheel of the cruiser was Private Joseph Murphy.

MISCELLANY

At this late date I discover how WWDC managed to broadcast the first bulletin of the manhole explosion at 7th and F sts. nw. Judy Sartain of 1835 K st. nw. was at the intersection when the blast occurred, and immediately phoned her favorite news editor (and husband), J. Denis Sartain, who put the story on Transit Radio's FM wavelength —and immediately emptied every radio-equipped vehicle in the area . . . Mr. and Mrs. John J. Outcalt of 605 South Spring st., Falls Church, Va., are back from a five-week honeymoon trip to the Pacific coast, and Jack says he and his bride had a wonderful time—even if there was "a slight delay" in taking the trip. They've been married 21 years . . . William M. Stuart, our stamp editor, is also observing an anniversary. He's starting his fifty-seventh year as a reporter, having broken in with the Lawrence (Mass.) Sun in 1893 . . . The District Liner who wanted to know where to get his razor blades sharpened gets help from two sources. Joseph W. Cheyney of No. 1 Walker ave., Gaithersburg, Md., suggests that he write to the Durham-Enders Razor Corp., Mystic, Conn. And Maj. Charles S. Coulter of 4212 37th st. nw. says that the ABC Supply Co., 1414 14th st. nw., which often advertises on this page, "can sharpen anything that cuts" . . . Wouldn't it be ironic if this sizzling summer were to become known as "The Year of the Deep Freeze?"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Male tiger kitten, born on the Fourth of July; his mother is half-Persian, his fur is extra thick and long." (OLiver 5280.)

"Four little kittens, about 10 weeks old; clean and healthy." (GEorgia 2646.)

"Two white kittens, 2 months old, male and female; accustomed to children." (ADams 1163.)

COINCIDENCE DEPT.

The current issue of the Yellow Cab Co.'s "Yellogram" reports an uncanny series of coincidences relating to two brothers, Warren B. and John G. Nuckles (Nos. 24 and 480).

Both started driving Yellows on the same day; both reported their first accidents at precisely the same minute last week; both had been struck from behind—in both cases by another cab; both had been motionless at the time of the accident.

And just to finish the story appropriately, the damaged parts were different on the two cabs—but both repair bills came to $38.50.

CRITIC

Bill Houston of 4015 71st ave., Landover Hills, Md., suggests that those Florida investors should be permitted to buy Capital Transit on one condition: that they move the system to Florida.

Ingrid Called 'Shy Spirit' By Rossellini

Rome, Aug. 15 (U.P.).—Italian Movie Director Roberto Rossellini today described Ingrid Bergman, the actress, as a shy, timid spirit who will live in seclusion in Italy until her divorce becomes final.

Rossellini refused to confirm or deny reports he would marry Miss Bergman, stating, "I can only repeat what I said at Stromboli—I can neither confirm nor deny anything about these reports."

He said, however, "I am a free man," when asked about his marital status.

Rossellini was grave when he spoke of Miss Bergman's decision to retire from the screen.

"She is a tremendous actress," he said, "with the inborn gift which a woman must have to become a great actress.

"Her decision to retire was due to her shy, timid spirit which was so hurt by that terrible publicity she has received since she came to Italy.

"She made up her mind to retire four months ago. She has been used to publicity, but never to the scandalous type that has appeared since she arrived here."

He said Miss Bergman's divorce from Dr. Peter Lindstrom of Hollywood is being filed in Sweden through attorneys in the United States, but added that she has not yet settled the question of the custody of her young daughter, Pia.

Rossellini, who lost 20 pounds since he went with Miss Bergman to make a film on the tiny volcanic isle of Stromboli off the coast of Sicily, explained his own "free" marital status. He obtained a civil annulment of his own marriage in Budapest in 1942 and the annulment was later recognized by the Italian courts.

Rossellini said his plans include a projected schedule of film-making which ranges from Italy to Indo-China.

But first, he said, he will finish "Stromboli," the Bergman picture he started shooting a little more than four months ago.

He said once "Stromboli" is finished he will start work on a film "with a definite political slant," a picture called "Dark Madonna," the story of the election campaign in Italy in April, 1948.

He said that early in 1950 he may accept an offer made by the Vatican to shoot two films in Indo-China. The films would concern missionary work.

Nehru Urges India To Rededicate Self

New Delhi, India, Aug. 15 (AP).—Prime Minister Jawahamrial Nehru, speaking on the second anniversary of Indian independence, appealed to his countrymen today to rededicate themselves to the service of the nation in the spirit of Mohandas Gandhi.

Earlier Nehru led rededication prayers and planted a tree at Rajghat, where the body of the Hindu leader was cremated.

Ax to Swing, GOP Staff Fears

By Robert S. Allen

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

Republican National Headquarters is in a dither. The air is thick with reports that the new chairman, Guy Gabrielson, plans a wholesale headlopping.

Robert S. Allen

Gabrielson takes over active command this week. Friends have been dropping broad hints that high on his agenda is a hardboiled housecleaning of "defeatist-minded deadwood."

It is known that since his election Gabrielson has conferred with congressional and other party chiefs on revitalizing the committee's big staff. Hugh Scott, former chairman, made no changes when he took over. He became very popular with the staff, on which he leaned heavily. Some of his critics held this as a complaint against him.

There has been no indication who is listed for the ax. That's the reason for the staff's uneasiness. Also, Gabrielson has a business reputation as a hard worker and driver.

National headquarters has 80 full-time employes. Highest paid are Publicity Director William Murphy, who gets $27,000 a year, and Finance Director Edwin Bacher who receives $20,000.

Democratic Time Bomb

The brickbat is the fact that one of his firms is a heavy RFC borrower.

The Carthage Hydrocol Corp., which Gabrielson heads, has received three RFC loans totaling $18,500,000. The first loan, for nine million dollars, was granted in April, 1948. Subsequently, the company got two other loans of $3,500,000 and six million dollars, the last in April of this year.

The transactions were perfectly legitimate. The corporation, with offices in New York and Brownsville, Tex., is making gasoline from natural gas by a new process. Full-scale production is scheduled for November.

Democrats will not attack the loans. But if and when Gabrielson assails Administration spending, they are all set to counter that he is a big beneficiary of the spending.

Shorts

Washington's fetid heat has made no dent on Rhode Island's Senator Theodore Green. The rugged, 82-year-old millionaire still travels to and from his office in crowded streetcars . . . Workers remodeling the Senate and House chambers are uncovering smudge marks of the burning of the Capitol by the British. The marks are under inch-thick coats of paint . . . Iowa supporters of Senator Robert Taft emphatically deny that close ties prevail between him and National Committeeman Harrison Spangler. The Taftites are saying they favor the Iowa State Central Committee's demand that Spangler resign . . . All three of Connecticut's Republican Congressmen—James Patterson, Antoni Sadlak and John Davis Lodge—would like to run as successor to Senator Raymond A. Baldwin . . . Representative Chase Going Woodhouse (D., Conn.) is practically certain to be named to Baldwin's seat by Governor Chester Bowles.

Pointed Hint

Philippine President Elpidio Quirino got no definite promises of aid while in Washington, but he did take away with him a pointed hint.

It was that the United States would look with favor on the liberation of several hundred imprisoned wartime Filipino guerillas who fought under American officers.

The partisans fought valiantly against the Japs. After the war they were imprisoned on murder and other charges made, in many cases, by former collaborators now holding high Philippine office. Many of the alleged offenses were "liquidations" ordered by American officers. The imprisoned guerillas were offered amnesty several years ago on condition they "confessed their crimes."

They flatly refused. One reason was their desire to avoid embarrassing their former American commanders.

Note: Members of Quirino's party told Washington officials that Chiang Kai-shek's visit to Manila was chiefly to try to obtain funds from wealthy Chinese. It also was intimated an effort was made to call off Chiang's trip, but he insisted on making it.

Brannan Plan

While Secretary Charles Brannan's farm plan is getting the gate in Congress, the Farm Bureau Federation is losing membership in Iowa and Minnesota because of opposition to the project.

The Farmers Union has definitely made membership gains as a result of its pro-Brannan-plan stand.

Senator Edward Thye (R., Minn.) says Farm Bureau membership in his State is higher than last year, but admits the Farmers Union is making "inroads." Also, that the fight between the two organizations is intensifying.

"The militant opposition of the national officers of the Farm Bureau to the plan is unquestionably causing a lot of doubts among rank-and-file members," they said. "It looks like the fight between the bureau and the union will get hotter in the months to come."

Note: Wallace's Iowa Farmer (no connection with Henry) will release figures next week on a poll on the Brannan plan.
